Packers' Union, to present to Mr. Johnson a beautiful silver cocktail set on behalf of the entire staff of the company. Mr. Watson expressed the sincere hope that Mr. and Mrs. Johnson would be spared many years to use the gift.

Mr. Johnson, with visible feeling, acknowledged the gift and the many kind remarks that had been made. He wished to say that any success of the company was due in large measure to the loyalty of its employees. He hoped that this loyalty would be extended to the new manager, Col. Nicholls. As for the gift, he would treasure it as long as he lived and, when he had occasion to use it, he would indeed remember the "boys" here. He was proud, he said, to think that his associates thought so much of him. On behalf of Mrs. Johnson and himself he could only say "thank you."

HIGHEST OF HONORS HIS

Lord Reading Forged to Front Through Changing World Conditions

Had Keen Mind

This, Together With Capacity For Work, Made Him Great Statesman

LONDON, Dec. 31: (AP)—Rufus Daniel Isaacs, first Marquess of Reading, who died yesterday, ended his career in possession of the highest honors that his government could give him. He forged to the front through the changing conditions of the late Victorian era and was still in his prime when the world war started. With one of the keenest minds of his generation, and almost prodigious capacity for hard work, he left his mark upon world affairs and held many of the high positions of the British Empire.

He was viceroy of India, a regal post second in importance to that of the king only. He was lord chief justice, solicitor-general, attorney general and secretary of state for foreign affairs.

He headed the Anglo-French loan mission to America in world war days, and borrowed half a billion dollars at a time when the cause of the allies hung in the balance. Later he was special envoy and high commissioner and special ambassador to the United States. A grateful government made him a viscount for these labors.

Son of Merchant

He was born October 10, 1860, the son of a well-to-do London merchant. He was given a good education in England and on the continent but ran away to sea. He spent two years before the mast, and as a boy standing in the bow of the vessel, first saw the low shores of India. Fifty years later he saw them for the second time when he went there as viceroy.

Back in England young Isaacs tackled the stock exchange. He learned a lot and went broke under the "hammering" of other members.

He wanted to study law then, but his father insisted that he should go into business. The son announced instead that he intended to stand upon his own feet, and that if he couldn't do it in England he would go to America.

So firm was his resolve that only the pleading of his mother as he stood on the gangplank at Liverpool dissuaded him. His mother promised that he would be permitted to study law.

In 1900 he turned to politics. As a Liberal candidate he stood for Parliament and was defeated. But four years later he won a seat at Reading, which he held until 1913, when he was appointed lord chief justice.

He continued as lord chief justice of England until 1921, meanwhile becoming a baron. The outstanding incident of this tenure was his sentencing to death of Sir Roger Casement, the Irish patriot, for treason.

COOPER AND BEERY FILM

Two Popular Stars Featured In "O'Shaughnessy's Boy"—Midnight Frolic For New Year's Eve

Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper are co-starred again in "O'Shaughnessy's Boy," which is the New Year holiday mid-week feature offering Wednesday and Thursday on the screen of the Capitol Theatre here. A vivid story of circus life, it is a dramatic, human picture of father love, replete with pathos, humor and spectacle and abundantly punctuated with thrills. There is a triumphant, smashing climax as the son, realizing the sacrifices of his father, in turn sacrifices himself.

Circus spectacle is one of the features of the picture including menagerie tent with elephants, tigers, lions, monkeys, camels, water buffalo, llamas as well as a circus parade. The action is very thrilling.

Midnight Frolic

Following the second show tonight, the annual New Year's Eve Frolic will get under way. A special variety program of screen and stage presentations has been arranged. Highlights will be the Capitolians concert party on the stage and on the screen will be offered the musical comedy picture "Here Comes the Band" featuring Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce, Nat Pendleton and Ted Healy. The Prince Rupert Boys' Band is also on the program and other attractions will include a cash drawing and fun and favors for all.

WHIFFLETS

From the Waterfront

The 25-foot two-masted auxiliary sailing boat Marie, on the way from Seattle to Ketchikan with Frank Dona and companion on board, called in port yesterday morning. It arrived early in the morning and left about 12:30 noon in continuation of the voyage north. Coming up the coast, the Marie was beset with continual bad weather. She had left Victoria on December 6 and had made a call at Nanaimo enroute. It is rather late in the season for vessels of this type to be abroad.

Union steamer Catala, Capt. James Findlay, returned to port at 9:15 this morning from Stewart, Anyox and other northern points with a light list of passengers and sailed at 1:30 this afternoon for Vancouver and waypoints.

No boats being in with catches, there was no sale of halibut on the local fish exchange this morning.

Christmas Music By Philharmonic

Fortnightly Broadcast Dedicated To One of Active Members Who Is Ill at Present

Christmas music was featured Sunday night on the fortnightly broadcast program of the Prince Rupert Philharmonic Society from First United Church. The only vocal soloist of the evening was Mrs. A. J. Webber. Charles P. Balagno was a piano soloist as well as accompanist. Dr. H. N. Brocklesby was, as usual, conductor and Lee Gordon was announcer. Miss Swanna Olafson assisted at the pipe organ. The program was dedicated to S. J. Hunter, one of the active members of the society, who is at present a patient in the Prince Rupert General Hospital.
