REFUSAL TO STAMPEDE

In spite of the fact that the end of the depression had not yet come for over a million people in Canada and that Bolton, Christian, Fitch, Brown, this was capitalized by the forces of disaffection to stir P Knutson, Houston, R. Smith. up trouble and try to inaugurate a system of government which is foreign to British and Canadian ideals, it is McLeod, A. Smith, Roma, Parlow worthy of notice that about eighty percent of the ballots Judge; Bill, Currie, Kihara, Schucast in the last election were for members of one of the bert. two older political parties. This does not seem to indicate that people are tired of the old parties. The indication is that the movement for a change of political system is much less important than has been usually represented.

In spite of the fact that only twenty percent of the population were affected by the spirit of unrest, it should ! be strongly urged upon members of Parliament and political leaders that the disaffection has made sufficient Calgary Defeats headway to indicate that if something is not done to imheadway to indicate that, if something is not done to improve conditions, it is likely to grow in influence and power. Sore spots in the body politic should be healed as rapidly as possible and conditions made such that there Northwestern Hockey League Play can be no excuse for efforts to stampede electors into breaking off into untried paths. Liberals can do that if they will. If they will not do it, we must expect further trouble when the next depression comes. The demand for the right to earn a decent living is just as great today as first prairie game in the North- occan falls western Hockey League was played OCEAN FALLS

McGEER'S ELECTION

It is regrettable that the McGeer election count should have been done in such a way as to mislead each candidate at the beginning. The law is designed to give every elector a vote and to provide that his intention shall be carried out. At the same time there must be no mark on the ballot which might be interpreted as doing away with the secrecy of the poll, a feature which in this country is valued so highly.

If a ballot is marked with a stroke instead of a cross and is otherwise correct, it may be argued that the voter intended to vote for the candidate designated. Yet a returning officer may argue that putting a stroke instead of a cross opposite the name distinguishes that ballot from the others and, therefore, it should be invalid. In past judicial recounts County Court judges have usually taken the view that, if it was evident who the voter wished to vote for, the ballot should be allowed unless there was some evident attempt made to tamper with the ballot by marking it in such a way that it was clear he was trying to make known that it was his ballot. Ballots marked with a stroke have been allowed and also those marked with a cross close to the name instead of in the place intended for the cross. That seems to have been the view taken by Judge Ellis in Vancouver which resulted in the election of Mr. McGeer. Other judges might take different views and that is why an effort is being made to take it before another judge since the C. C. F. has suffered from the ruling of Judge Ellis.
