SAMPLE OF ARMY WORK

Response to Salvation Army Appeal Beginning to Gain Force

A bright day with a nip of frost in the air made Christmas War Cry selling a pleasure.
"Would you like a Christmas War Cry?" asked the Salvation Army officer, as a gentleman, caught in the act of shaving, answered the door. Somewhat taken aback and possibly embarrassed our friend stammered his regrets at being unable to purchase a copy.

We had already noticed the floor bare of covering but spotlessly clean and the scantily clad kiddies who were looking at us with large wondering eyes and with whom we were trying to make friends. And so it came about we learned that the new baby sister in the hospital with the mother were expected home soon.

"Take the 'Cry' to your wife. Never mind the dime. Someone's quarter will cover this," the officer said as she left to continue the sale of "Crys" but not to forget the picture presented of a man courageously battling with adverse circumstances over which he had no control and a mother whose love for home and children helped her to bear the bitterness of her lot.

The next day the Army obeyed the urge to follow up the case, painfully conscious, it had a sensitive nature to deal with.

Coal found its way to that home before mother returned with the baby so that a fire could be kept burning all night.

Local folk remember only too well the severity of the weather this time last year. A Christmas hamper and clothing was also sent and with a little further assistance during the rest of the winter this grateful family weathered the storm.

RECITAL IS VERY FINE

Prince Rupert Philharmonic Society Never Heard to Better Advantage

Making its first appearance of season in public concert, the Prince Rupert Philharmonic Society, under the direction of Dr. H. N. Brocklesby, last night presented a highly acceptable recital in the Capitol Theatre. The program was largely, although not entirely, of sacred numbers. Since its last appearance in public, the Society has acquired a number of new members. The organization continues to advance in skill and finish and the director and the members are to be congratulated on the progress they are making. Without criticizing the present ones, some additional men's voices could be used to advantage. The women's section is more adequate.

While every number was good, outstanding ones included the choruses "Green Pastures" and "Triumph and Thanksgiving," both of which gave the entire company full scope for harmony and volume.

The recitative solo of John E. Davey, accompanied by the choir and with violin obligato by A. C. Cameron, was something a little different and, as such, proved interesting.

Also entitled to special mention was the ladies' chorus, particularly "The Cradle Song" (Chapman) which was done with fine tonal effect and precision. The well known Brahms' "Lullaby" as a postlude was brief but very much appreciated.

Certainly a piece de resistance was Miss Marie Balagno's piano solo. Miss Balagno has given this number before in public but never so well. At the start she showed a little shy timidity but soon became absorbed in the instrument and it was indeed a distinctive rendition of "Adagio" movement from the famous "Moonlight Sonata," made the more effective by the addition of the "Allegro" movement. Technique was high faultless and interpretation was very fine.

Much credit also devolved in connection with the concert upon Charles P. Balagno for his discriminatory and completely effective work as piano accompanist.

Dr. R. G. Large, president of the Prince Rupert Philharmonic Society, spoke briefly at the opening of the recital, acknowledging the work of assisting artists and thanking the Northern B. C. Power, Co. for loaning electrical fixtures for the lighting effects, the management of the Capitol Theatre for courtesy and, all others who had assisted.

The complete program was as follows:

Choral, "He Watching Over Israel" (Mendelssohn), The Choir.
Bartone solo, Aria: "It is Enough" from "Elijah" (Mendelssohn).
Dr. R. G. Large.
Russian Church Music—(a) Come O Blessed Lord" (Tchaikovsky) (b) "Bless Thou the Lord O My Soul" (Ippolitoff-Ivanoff), The Choir.
Pianoforte solo, Adagio-Allegro movements from "Moonlight Sonata" (Beethoven), Miss Marie Balagno.
Choral, (a) "Cradle Song" (Chapman); (b) "Overtones" (Rasbach), The Ladies.
Choral, (a) "Save Us O Lord" (Baird); (b) "Call to Remembrance" (Farrant), The Choir.
Vocal duet, "Ships That Pass in the Night" (Stephenson), Messdames H. N. Brocklesby and R. G. Large.
Recitative and Aria from "The Messiah" (Handel), soloist J. E. Davey, accompanied by choir; violin obligato by A. C. Cameron.
Violin solo (a) "In a Monastery Garden" (Kettelbey); (b) "Berceuse de Jocelyn" (Godard), A. C. Cameron.
Choral (a) "Green Pastures" (Brahms).

CHRISTIANS-COMMUNISTS

Race is on to Bring About New Order and Christianity Must Win, Declares Preacher

There is a race on today between Christianity and Communism to bring about a more just economic order for the common good of humanity. In the words of Dr. Stanley Jones in his book "Christ's Alternative to Communism," the only way to beat the Communist is to "beat him to it." Christianity must win this race to a "new day" and it is up to Christian people, following the Gospel of Jesus, to get into the race.

So declared Rev. C. D. Clarke at evening service in First United Church last night in concluding a series of sermons on economic problems of the day in relation to the church and Christianity. His subject was "Christ and Christianity."

"To follow Jesus today is to go to the left," declared Mr. Clarke, whose Scripture reading for the evening was "The Sermon on the Mount." Jesus had been crucified because He was a radical. No one was ever crucified for following a middle course. Where the issue was the welfare of humanity, Jesus was away to the left. "He was a daring revolutionist and, if we take Jesus seriously, we, too, will be revolutionists—revolutionists of the non-violent type." The world was ready for a revolution today, humanity having outgrown the present economic system. Christianity had gone as far as it could under the present economic order. Therefore, the economic system must be changed. To bring about this change was the great problem for Christianity today. A change in the economic system might not give the world the Kingdom of God at once but it would be a step nearer that kingdom. It was the business of Christ's people to lead in social and political movements.

Mr. Clarke came out definitely as being opposed to the method of the Communists—a method of force based on a spirit of revenge and hate. People, certainly Christians, were not afraid of a change in the system, the preacher declared. What they feared was violence. The Communist was wrong to hold on to an orthodoxy of violence in this country. There might have been some excuse for bringing about a change by violence in Russia for the people there had been kept down by violence and violence begets violence. In British countries changes had been brought about and could still be brought about by constitutional methods. It was the easiest thing in the world to resort to force but the personality of all should be respected. It was wrong to take life and destroy personality. People were still responsive to kindness, consideration, justice and co-operation. The necessity of knowledge in bringing about intelligent co-operation was stressed by the preacher who admitted that, in any process of change and advancement, there would always be suffering and sacrifice. However, this was something the true Christian would not fear.

The word "Messiah" meant "leader to a new day." That was why people two thousand years ago had flocked to Christ. Christianity must today win the race to a "new day."

Reduction Of Large Navies Asked by Japs

LONDON, Dec. 16:—Following rejection by the other member nations of the five-power naval conference of its demand for naval equality with Great Britain and the United States, Japan stated that it saw no reason to change its demand but requested a large reduction in the greater navies. The conference may drag on but general agreement now appears improbable.

The conference may become further complicated with a demand by France to also be given equality in the event of Japan's demand for equal naval strength with United States and Great Britain being acceded to.

There is not the slightest sign of a general agreement and a new naval building race appears to be a certainty.
