THE END OF THE WORLD AND SUCH IDEAS

The synopsis of the sermon of Rev. C. D. Clarke, pastor of First United Church, published in the Daily News yesterday was read with considerable interest, indeed with more than usual interest, for it was a different sort of a sermon. It got away from time-worn somnolence inducing theological platitudes and ancient preaching concepts and, instead, Mr. Clarke introduced some new ideas in this sermon—or really series of two sermons. To the deeper students of the Scriptures his general discussion of the Books of Daniel and Revelations would appeal more particularly. His declaration that the old theory of the end of the world was "knocked on the head" would be more liable to attract the attention of such every-day practical folk as we.

In spite of what some of our good friends in other denominations may think, we are inclined to agree with Mr. Clarke's idea that God's way is "not cataclysmic but the way of the law." Today people are dropping the old awesome and fearful attitude towards God, by which term we mean the Creator and Guide of the Universe, and are beginning to think of Him as a just and sympathetic God. This is the conception of God that is being more and more generally embraced today, we believe, as the human creatures of earth cast about in these times of trials and tribulations for something new on which to fasten their life lines of hope. The idea of God which appeals to them is that of a Divine Being who is capable of helping and forgiving—a charitable and a sympathetic God, not a vengeful and terrible one.

Just as the most of preachers have long since given up the old "hellfire and brimstone" idea, so now the antique idea of the end of the world is being abandoned. The more of these old ideas that are thrown out, the more effective work will the apostles of Christianity and the churches be able to carry out. After all, a minister's work should be more than disseminating some of the Old Testament theories which do nothing more than frighten the children, delude the ignorant and superstitious and which the most of folk take with the proverbial "grain of salt," anyway.

We welcome Mr. Clarke's advanced and modern ideas and are thankful that ministers today are allowed to be able to express themselves without being burned at the stake for heresy.

BABE RUTH TO BOSTON

Bambino to Be Assistant Playing Manager With High Sounding Title

BOSTON, Feb. 27: (CP)—Appointment was announced yesterday of George Herman (Babe) Ruth as assistant playing manager of the Boston Braves National League baseball club with the title of second vice-president. Terms were not announced but it is understood, in addition to a substantial salary, that Ruth will be in line for a share of club profits.

"I will play with the Braves as long as my legs hold out," Ruth said after the deal was announced and he had signed a three-year contract.

The Yankees gave Ruth a free and unconditional release.
