TAKE NO CHANCES

The electors at a time like this cannot afford to take chances. They have had an experience of the Bennett administration during the past few years and everyone knows how useless it has been toward aiding recovery in this part of the province. They have had no experience of the C. C. F. which only has a program, very similar to that of the Liberals up to a certain point, but beyond that point vague and unproven. This party does not expect to form a government but simply to try to harass whatever administration is in charge of affairs. Why then waste a vote on the C. C. F.? The party may mean well but that is as far as it goes.

It is probable that the Liberal party will be in charge of the affairs of the Dominion for the next four or five years. While we know many people have been dissatisfied with the party, thinking that it does not advance rapidly enough to keep pace with modern trends, there are among them today many men who are determined the party must make progress. These will be among the leaders. Our best bet is to trust to these leaders and show our trust by voting for the local representative, Olof Hanson.

Union steamer Cardena, Capt. Ernest Georgeson, is due in port tomorrow morning from Ketchikan with four carloads of mild south and will sail soon thereafter on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

Motorship Bellingham is due in port this afternoon from Ketchikan with four carloads of cured salmon for trans-shipment east over Canadian National Railways.

CANDIDATE IS HEARD

necessary, to invoke the Elections Act to force the discontinuance of publication of certain type of campaign propaganda and put those responsible for it in jail. Mr. Panter was referring to "The Political Corner" which both he and the chairman noted had made its initial appearance.

The issue of the election, as Mr. Panter saw it, was between capitalism, with starvation amid plenty, or socialism, with an abundance available for use not profit.

Mr. Winch

Mr. Winch has a lucid style and put the audience in good humor at the outset with a bright opening. His address was, however, considerably longer than Prince Rupert audiences are used to and would possibly have been more effective had it been more concise. However, except for one apparent inebriate who was assisted to make his exit, there was little disturbance.

Mr. Winch dealt briefly at the start with the provincial legislature and its work. He charged the legislature and its members with incapacity and waste of time. During the first four weeks of the session little legislation was dealt with, important business being deferred until near the close when it was rushed through without time for adequate discussion. He criticized the members of the old political parties for holding all their meetings before elections and failing to give an account of their stewardship to the electors during their term of office. C. C. F. members, he pointed out, devoted all their time to public affairs, considering it their duty to do so.

Referring briefly to "mud-slinging," Mr. Winch declared that such tactics were merely an attempt to divert the attention of the people from the real questions to side issues, misrepresenting principles which all knew to be impregnable. People who would be misled by such tactics were of no use to the C. C. F. anyway.

As Mr. Winch saw it all people desired real economic security, to be assured of an opportunity to earn a livelihood. This was something that capitalism could not and would not give. Under capitalism people would continue to live in degradation with no chance of getting out of it. Under socialism there would be co-operation for the common good. The fruits of the age of plenty would be available to all. One would not profit at the expense of the other. However, the task would not be complete until capitalism was wiped out not only in British Columbia and in Canada but from the entire face of the earth.

Mr. Winch traced the development of capitalism up to the present time. Machinery had made it possible for a maximum of goods to be produced with a minimum of effort. Today people lived amid plenty but were starving to death due to private ownership of industry erecting artificial barriers to keep apart the unemployed and the mass of goods for which there was no market either at home or abroad. Under socialism this would all be changed. Here Mr. Winch entered upon a somewhat lengthy discussion along technocratic lines of the displacement of man power by machinery and the result of unemployment on the one hand and the production of a mass of indispensible goods on the other. The only opening that capitalism offered was "the relief camps for the boys and the street for the girls." Penal and mental institutions were becoming overcrowded with youths and the health of children and young people was being undermined. There were no jobs, no openings and a situation had arisen which demanded the serious consideration of all people, if not for themselves for their children.

A pulp mill at Prince Rupert might mean more jobs in this locality but it would most certainly be at the expense of jobs of people elsewhere.

The cheapest thing on earth today was an unemployed member of the working class.

Preparing For War

The major industry in the world today, due to the predatory capitalist system, Mr. Winch declared, was preparation for war. Owners of factories saw in war an opportunity for the disposal of goods which could not be sold in any other way. "Out of the last war came the Russian revolution," declared the speaker. "Out of the next war may come a worldwide social revolution and the end of capitalism." However, the working classes were becoming educated and, armed with weapons, they might not, at the order of the ruling class, again consent to blindly slaughter their fellowmen without apparent reason.

The C. C. F., the speaker pointed out, had no antagonism against the capitalistically-minded individuals. Their fight was entirely against the system. Socialism offered economic security to all who had the intelligence to grasp it.

If a government could obtain $5,000,000 to build a bridge, surely it could obtain money to provide better conditions for the people, work and wages, proper facilities for insurance of health and physical well being.

Mr. Winch urged his listeners to investigate and analyze the principles of the C. C. F. If they found them practical, sound and logical, he asked the support of the voters at the polls. As for himself he considered the C. C. F. the finest crusade in history on behalf of humanity, one the ideal of which was to enable all people not only to
