MEMORIES WIRE LINE

(By Anna May Ullman)

There was talk sandy-haired, fast-stepping Hughie Birch, genial veteran operator, who came down to Beirnes' at intervals for mail. He told me some great yarns.

"Did I ever tell you about the time I got my whiskers stuck to tree, Anna?" he once asked. Japan, "Well, I'd climbed up to chop off a limb that overhung the wire, and I leaned against the tree to brace myself.

"When I started down, I found my whiskers were stuck to some pitch on the tree and I had quite wash my whiskers.

"High water? I remember the time we had high water further up the line. I was relieving one of the men up north at the time.

"Going up the trail I had Jumbo, another linesman's dog ahead pleurisy. of me on the trail. When Jumbo waded I knew the water wasn't very deep but, when he started swim, I stepped carefully In ome places the water came up to my hips, but we got through.

Bill Blackstock

Jolly "Bill" Blackstock, line superintendent, came up from town, chasing line trouble.

"You know, Albert Shannos brought a piece of wild meat to che of the linemen. After cooking it for some hours, it was still tough as shoe leather.

"The lineman was getting a bit annoyed-'Albert, this meat list pretty tough!' he complained, and the complacent Indian slowly hifted his pine over to the other s'de of his mouth and said, 'Ya-as, i I know it's pretty tough, but it would be a sight tougher if yo didn't have any'."

Jim Mailen

Jim Mailen, Birch's partner: "Those Indians think it's great if they can phone or send a wire. "One day Albert Shanoss came along and wanted to phone Kispiox. I told him that would cost

"He didn't have the money so he pulled out a big ermine fur, and I got the operator in Kis-

"Said A!bert, 'Hello! Dis Kispiox?' 'Yes' 'How's everthing down there?' 'Fine' 'Alright Good bye.' And so the conversation ended."

Other Figures

At Sixth Cabin, Al McDougall, was an expert on skiis and snowhoes, and George Ironside, highlyeducated accountant.

John Jensen, carried my pack for quite a ways up the trail and had removed his usual bushy crop of red whiskers, evidently in my honor.

His partner Charley Janze who anted me to bake some pies for

Said he, "Even the dog turns up his nose at my cooking."

'The pack train? Yes it came quite late one year and by that me we were nearly out of supplies. Just a little flour and teal and a few other staples left. We la! had to go cut and hunt."

Matt Tiegen, the trapper, put me up on the top of his horse's pack and took me through some beaver dams near the Naas River. Lineman "Moose" McKay, whom met on the trail, wouldn't believe me when I told him I'd seen a fox about a mile or so back. I to'd him about the animal's long bushy fur, the small pointed face the tiny footprints in the
