CONTROLS THE AIR

A contemporary points out that it has become clear as one of the lessons from the Spanish rebellion that whoever controls the air controls the country. He says that the rebels have the air force and are bound to win, all the wonderful bravery and sacrifice of the other side going for naught. That was also true in Ethiopia.

HAS MANY ALIASES

It is claimed by "Industrial Worker" that Communism has many aliases in Canada. It mentions a few such as "The League Against War and Fascism," "The Canadian Youth Congress," "The Canadian Labor Defence League" and the "Ukrainian Labor Farmer Temple Association." The intimation is given that the brains directing the Communist party are very active. The heads have a full knowledge of the mentality of the workers and of their reactions. They never cease their labors.

Canada is a peaceful country inhabited by peaceable people but the aim of Communism is not peaceful. The object of the organization is to stir up strife, industrial and international. The Communists magnify grievances in order to stir up peaceful people and make them discontented. They work through all sorts of organizations and use people who are not themselves Communists. They do not believe in democracy but in government by force. In other words they favor a dictatorship, the dictatorship of the proletariat.

THE MONETARY SHUFFLE

There has been a new monetary shuffle in Europe during the past few days and it is still in progress. Each country is trying to do its best to protect its own interests, financial and otherwise. The old gold standard has gone and controlled finance is taking its place. Most of the important countries of the world are now seeking to gain financial advantage from its fluctuating currency. When this has gone on long enough for everyone to realize that financial war is just as useless and ineffective as the war of savages such as is in progress in Spain today, the nations will get together and stabilize currency until another break comes.

TAMING OF THE TIDES

Eastport Dreams of Quoddy's Dam And Its Resurrection

EASTPORT, Me., Sept. 29: (CP)—Residents of Eastport, just on the American side of the New Brunswick-Maine boundary line, site of the $40,000,000 Passamaquoddy Bay tide harnessing project, await the day of its resurrection predicted by President Roosevelt. Meanwhile the tide sweeps from Cobscook Bay to the Bay of Fundy untamed.

A community of 3,000 persons devoted largely to fishing, Eastport doubled its population during Quoddy's boom days. At one time 5,400 workers were employed on the job. Now, with virtually all the transient construction workers gone, the natives still retain hope. They refer to the situation as merely a "temporary abandonment."

Eventually, said President Roosevelt during a recent visit to his summer place, an adjacent Canadian summer home on Campobello Island, the worth of the project will be "sold to the American people."

Meantime the model colonial village, the extensive shops, warehouses and equipment have been turned over by the war department to the national youth administration to carry on a proposed youth work program. Tentative plans call for the prefabrication of materials to be used in youth programs throughout the country.

The refusal of Congress to appropriate more money stopped work on Quoddy in July after $7,000,000 had been spent from the 1935 emergency relief appropriation. Government engineers surveyed the vast project about three years ago. In 1935 an allotment was made for the first year's work and the works progress administration took charge.

Work Suspended

When work stopped there had been expended $2,900,000 for engineering, $2,000,000 for actual field construction, $1,500,000 for housing and $1,500,000 for plant and materials. Out of the engineering appropriations came "valuable contributions to engineering knowledge," says Lieut. Col. Philip B. Fleming, in charge of construction.

A metal corrosion laboratory, in which engineers studied the reaction of different metals and combinations of metals to sea water and climate, at varying tide levels, was termed an important part of the project. It was the largest test of its kind ever made, Fleming said.

Field construction included four rock-fill dams connecting small islands and the mainland in the Cobscook Bay area, the largest of these a 2,700 foot dam between the Pleasant Point reservation of the Passamaquoddy Indians to Carlow Island.

Quoddy village was built to care for 600 staff workers and their families along with barracks and mess facilities to accommodate about 2,400 men. There are 180 temporary permanent houses. As an American development—originally the project would have included Canadian waters—construction contemplated installation of five generating units of 12,500 kilowatts each in the main power station. Engineers say several times that amount could be generated with complete installation of units.

Parts of the project not completed are the Eastport and Lubec dams, gate structure and navigation lock and filling gates on Treat Island, and the power house on Moose Island.

OPTIMISM IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29: (CP)—Looking ahead just a bit, Steve O'Neill, the Indians' manager, says he believes his team will have an excellent chance for the American League pennant in 1937.

TRAINING OF YOUTH

Hitler Getting Reich Young Folk Ready For Nazis Tomorrow

BERLIN, Sept. 29: (AP)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, seeking to perpetuate the three and a half year old Nazi state he founded, is putting the nation's boys and girls between 10 and 18 years through a rigorous hardening process to form the country's backbone.

He wants a governing elite: to this end a new set-up in the Nazi youth program, comprising three organizations for boys and similar parallel ones for girls, is working itself out. It embraces the 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 youths between the ages of 10 and 18 years.

Membership now is voluntary, but Nazi youth leaders make no secret of their intentions to pass to compulsion if they can't get the youth otherwise.

The first step was taken with 10 to 12 year old boys through a recruiting campaign which proved successful on a voluntary basis. From three to eight years will be needed, Nazi leaders expect, before Hitler's dream is fully realized.

The small children are being placed in the already-existing "Young Folk" group to get their first instruction in national-socialist ideals. The age of this group are from 10 to 14 years. The healthiest and most intelligent after four years of training will be selected for the also already-existing "Hitler Youth" organization which is earmarked to take over the leadership of the nation.

Privileged "Hitler Youth"

All others not chosen for the privileged "Hitler Youth" are to go into the yet to be organized "State Youth" where, until the age of 18, when they will be subject to the Labor Service, they will be under the supervision of their more fortunate brothers who were taken into the "Hitler Youth."

Only those who have gone through the "Hitler Youth" will be admitted to membership in the Nazi party and be allowed to hold public office later in life or to participate in public affairs in any way. Hence, as the old timers die off, the Germany of the future, according to Hitler's dream, will have 100 percent Nazis at the helm.

A similar but less rigid arrangement is planned for girls. The motto is: "Make the German girl a better mother." The nucleus will be the "Hitler Girls" group which will take over the training of girls from 10 to 14 years of age. Their program calls for 70 percent sport and the remainder divided among housekeeping, sanitation, air raid drills and Red Cross work.

Beginning at 10, boys likewise devote all day Saturday to the "Young Folk" organization. The "Hitler Youth" and "State Youth" must give more of their time. They will meet on two week-day evenings and Sunday afternoons.

From the "Hitler Youth" and the "State Youth" the boys pass into the Labor Service for six months and thence into the army for one year. Thereafter, they will be kept militarily fit by reserve organizations which train six weeks annually up to the age of 45. A boys' leadership academy has been opened in Braunschweig and another is to be started in Munich. A girls' school is being created in Hitler's town of Berchtesgaden in Bavaria. "This new step," says Reich Youth Leader Baldur von Schirach, "is one of the most important in the educational history of mankind."

BRITISH COLUMBIA LEADERS

Hon. Amor De Cosmos, Premier of British Columbia from Dec. 23, 1872, to February 9, 1874, will be remembered as being largely responsible for passing an act whereby the ballot superseded the old system of open voting in B. C. He was a very capable statesman and in addition to being a provincial member for Victoria, he also represented that city in the House of Commons. When dual representation was abolished, De Cosmos resigned.

Wherever you go you will always see a great number of those who order Silver Spring and refuse to accept any other substitute. Silver Spring has enjoyed a nation-wide reputation for over two decades.
