Physical Director Tells Of Various Youth Movements In Different Countries of World

Ian Eisenhardt Says Dr. Weir's Idea is to Give Everybody Chance For Abundant Life—Speaks Before Local Rotary Club

"Hon. Dr. G. M. Weir's idea in establishing the physical education centres is to give everybody a chance for an abundant life," declared Ian Eisenhardt, director of the physical education movement in British Columbia, in addressing the Rotary Club at its regular weekly luncheon yesterday, Walter Blackstock presiding. Mr. Eisenhardt spoke of the excellent work done by Paul Kozoolin during the ten weeks he had been in Prince Rupert and of the value of the work to the city. He urged the Rotary Club members to attend the display on Saturday and to take an interest in a movement that was of such great value to the young people and the city generally.

In his address Mr. Eisenhardt spoke of the universal impulse to play and how the intelligent direction of the impulse could become of such great value.

Giving Youth Attention "Seldom has the youth been given as much attention as today," he said. "Wherever one goes, one hears about youth movements, young people's associations, young hikers' clubs, recreational youth centres, youth hostels, etc. and, besides the organizations already mentioned, we can add Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Wanderfogel (wandering birds), Cubs and many more.

"Before I deal with problems here in Canada and discuss with you our Provincial Recreation Centres in British Columbia, let us look around in the world and find out more about what is behind the various youth movements and then go back to Canada and see if in spite of no accent on the word 'movement' we are not doing just as well as in most other countries.

"It is to Germany we must travel to get first hand information on youth movements. The first real movement of the modern world was started as far back as the spring of 1811 and was called 'Deutsche Turnverein'. The founder was Friedrich Ludwig Jahn. Jahn was born in 1778 and, as a young university student, he fought against Napoleon at Jena. The defeat was too much for him and, together with many other German patriots, he conspired against Napoleon. F. L. Jahn founded the German turn with the objective in view of training the Germans physically and making them strong enough to avenge defeats suffered in the past.

After the peace of Paris in 1814 Jahn was made director of physical education in Prussia and immediately the whole spirit is changed. His work from then on is to create harmony in the human evolution, and establish the right mental and physical balance in life. "The young people loved Jahn. At the turn-squares, they brought their lunches, but only water was permitted to be drunk. 'Virtuous, clean and always ready' was a turner's motto. Although there have been times when the interest in the 'turnverein' has been very small, it is, however, a world movement, because everywhere you see Germans you will also see turnvereins. In the year 1914 there were 1,400,000 members in the mother turn in Germany. "When Denmark in 1864 lost Schleswig-Holstein to Germany there was a strong movement to gain within what was lost without." The greatest movement was the establishment of the 'People's Folk-High Schools.' The founder was F. S. Gruntwig, who was born in the year 1783. Gruntwig created a new sort of education, an education not for learning but for life, and not for childhood's uses, but for the uses of the adult world. Although the first school started in 1851 it was not until after the war in 1864 that the movement grew and at the present time there are over sixty of such schools in Denmark. Denmark's tremendous development in all phases of civilization—economic, social, political and moral—should be credited primarily to these schools.

VANCOUVER MAN TALKS

Labor Unity is Theme of Address By R. R. Webster

R. R. Webster of Vancouver addressed a good sized audience in the C. C. F. Hall on Thursday evening on the subject of "Problems of Unity." Ex-alderman Oscar Larsen, president of the Unemployed Association, was chairman. Mr. Webster, a clear and forceful speaker, said there were three chief obstacles to labor unity—chauvinism, sectarianism and opportunism. These narrowing tendencies the speaker deplored. Without breadth of vision and a willingness to sink individual prejudices for the common good labor unity was impossible. The forces of reaction could not be successfully overcome and the danger of a fascist dictatorship was imminent. The solution of the Communist Party for the problems of labor was a united front with socialist, fraternal and cultural organizations of liberal tendency and thought. Mr. Webster was well received and answered questions and criticism. A collection was taken up to defray expenses.
