ROUTE FOR HIGHWAY

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

The route to be taken by the highway is one of the big problems agitating the public mind in Prince Rupert. So far as can be gathered, the engineers favor the route at present being tollowed which, they say, is the shortest and best route to Terrace. It leads to a ferry across the river some miles the other side of Haysport with the rest of the highway on the south side of the river.

Premier Pattullo, when in the city recently, made a casual remark in regard to his impression when flying down the valley, that a road to the canneries was practicable and very desirable. This set the advocates of the cannery route going and as a result the question is being generally discussed on the street and wherever men congregate. Evidently there is considerable difference of opinion and much lack of information.

In the meantime a joint committee of the Senior and Junior Chamber of Commerce is discussing the subject McCLYMONT and securing all possible information and doubtless they will bring their report before their organizations or before a joint meeting.

The chief arguments of the advocates of the interior route is that they want to get to Terrace at the nearest Capture Cup by Victory in Playpossible date and are not interested in the river route. For the river route it is argued that the canneries would provide business for the city and that most of the people now ground softball games were as living will not get to Terrace over the road anyway, there- follows: fore it is best to take the business that is offering and seal Cove, 3. let the main object take care of itself.

Australia needed to win both singles today to capture the cup but Fred Perry swept White Sex to sixth with Washing-6-3 in the final match of the challenge round, enabling Great Britain to retain the trophy. Adrian Quist had earlier in the day tied the series at two all by defeating H. W. (Bunny) Austin in the first of the singles 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3. Perry was unbeatable in his game.

It is the first time in thirty years that Britain has won the cup four years in a row.

Ready For Transatlantic Service

The first of the great new Imperial Airways flying boats which will be used on day and night flights on the empire routes, including the new transatlantic service, recently . made its first appearance at the Short factory in Rochester, England, where 28 are being built. The ships will carry 26 passengers, bagage and mail at a cruising speed of 150 miles an hour. They are said to be the last word in aerodynamic efficiency. The above photo shows the advanced streamlining of the new ship.
