SALMON AT THIS PORT

Would be of Great Advantage if More of Canned Product Was Handled Here

All citizens of Prince Rupert look to see the city become a receiving and shipping centre for canned salmon, something which would be of great advantage to the port, according to R. M. Winslow, assistant manager of the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Company, in an address to the Prince Rupert Rotary Club at its regular weekly luncheon yesterday at the Commodore Cafe.

Japan, flushed with success of the deep sea salmon fishing off the Siberian coast, would make the marketing of salmon difficult unless something were done. In the revision of the British Empire treaties, provision should be made for an increased protection for Canadian canned salmon in the British market. This would help solve the problem.

Mr. Winslow spoke of the annual fish week observance and mentioned that the Dominion Government was to spend $100,000 in an advertising campaign to try to induce increased consumption of fish in Canada. While heartily in accord with this policy he did not think one short campaign was sufficient. It should be continued for several years. The object of the campaign was stated to be primarily to help the fisherman market their catches. The fishermen had suffered as a result of the depression. The difficulty was that a large percentage of the fish caught was not marketed in this country and he doubted if the campaign would materially increase the price of fish. Britain and the United States were the chief markets for Canadian fish.

The Empire trade treaties were to be revised next year and an effort was being made to secure better protection for Canadian fish in Empire markets.

Good Fishing This Year
There were a number of surprises in the fishing this year. The recuperation of the Fraser River was one of the outstanding features of the season. The run of sockeye this year was the greatest in that river since 1913.

The Skeena River had been slated for a small pack this year but it had proved to be one of the largest.

At Rivers Inlet there had been a good run but the unfortunate strike had made it impossible to estimate just how good the run had been. After this the fishermen and cannery men may get together so as to enable them to handle the fish at prices which may compare with the Japanese and with the Alaskan reds.

Pinks were in demand in England and the Japanese had been exploiting that market. However, Canada was getting some of the business. The Queen Charlotte Islands run had not been good this year. It was difficult to understand the conditions there and all had something to learn yet about the fisheries around the Islands.

At the close Mr. Winslow was thanked by President C. V. Eviatt for his interesting and instructive address.

Visitors at the luncheon included Olof Hanson M.P., James Lee, Sheldford Danton and Mr. Robinson.

New York Yankees Take Second Game Of World Series With 18 To 4 Score

Tony Lazzeri's home run with the bases full in the third.

How Scoring Was Done

The Yankees went after their win from the start as Crosetti, first man up, singled. Rolfe walked and DiMaggio bunted safely to fill the bases. Gehrig hoisted a high fly to Ott and Crosetti crossed the plate. Dickey hit a high fly to Leiber, scoring Rolfe, and opened the lead the Yankees never lost.

Giants squeezed home their first run in the second when Mancuso had advanced on Jackson's fly after walking and then came home on a wild pitch through Dickey's legs.

Giants yanked Schumacher in the third and put in left handed Al Smith after the Yankees had filled the bases. Gehrig singled, sending home two runs, and Dickey sent another home with a single. Selkirk flied out and Powell walked, filling the bases again. Smith gave way to Dick Coffman, the Giants' big right-hander, but Lazzeri, the first man up, smashed a homer into the right field stands.

In a desperate effort to overcome the American Leaguers' lead the Giants bunched singles with a walk to send over three runs in the fourth.

Yankees big guns again boomed out in the ninth against the Giants' fifth pitcher after they had yanked Coffman for a pinch-hitter in the fourth to use Frank Gahler.

Harry Gumbert was the victim as the Yankees bunched hits to score three more runs before Bill Dickey smashed a homer into lower right field stands, scoring two men before him.

Lefty Gomez yielded seven passes but was effective throughout.

Lazzeri's homer with the bases full was the first time the feat had been done since 1920 in World Series play.

Yankees 18 17 0
Giants 4 6 1

A new World Series record was set for runs scored in a single game. Ideal weather prevailed for the game and the Polo Grounds were packed with 43,543 fans. The most important personage in attendance was President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

ARGUMENT AT HIGH SCHOOL

Veterans and Youngsters Unable To Settle Differences On Football Field

An argument arose at the beginning of this week as to the relative merits of this year's High School team compared with last year's team. It was decided to settle this argument on the football field instead of in the boy's basement.

The veterans were Ritchie (captain), Clark, Bolton, Brown, Christian, Houston, Smith, P. Knutson, L. Knutson, Holkestad.

The youngsters were, Sheehan, McKay, Long, Cook, Scherk, McLean, Kihara, Judge, Ritchie (captain), and Blake.

The score was one goal each, so that the question of supremacy has still to be settled.
