ALMOSLINO ARE FOUND

Aerial Honeymoon Couple Unhurt Although Their Plane Badly Wrecked Near Ketchikan

KETCHIKAN, April 13:-Mr. and Mrs. Albert Almoslino, who had been missing for a week on a honeymoon flight from Seattle to Juneau, were found alive and safe late yesterday by the coastguard cutter Cyane. They were located on the beach beside their wrecked plane on an island in Behm Canal about forty miles from here. They were brought to Ketchikan by the Cyane.

Although their plane was badly damaged in a forced landing, neither Almoslino or his wife were injured although the latter is weak from exposure.

A search flier sighted the wreck of the Almoslino plane at Rutgers Island but saw no sign of the couple. He returned to Ketchikan and the coastguard cutter Cyane at once proceeded to the scene and located Almoslino and his 18-year old bride The couple were "ready to die together" they remarked. They had been a week without food. All they had plenty of was cold water. They had been unable even to light a fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Almoslino were brought here at 11 o'clock last night and are now in hospital. They were recovering satisfactorily today from their harrowing experience and it is expected will be able to leave hospital in three or four days.

ALMOSLINO TELLS STORY Almoslino explained that, after battling with low clouds and poor visibility for several hours after leaving Alert Bay a week ago Sunday, he made a forced landing at 4:15 that afternoon in Behm Canal. They spent that night in the plane and the pext day taxied across the Canal to Revilla Gigedo Island. While they were attempting to lash the plane to the shore, a gust of wind came up and wrecked it.

A party left here today with a view to salvaging motor, pontoons and possibly other parts. Hopes for the safety of the couple had diminished almost to the vanishing point when they
