Regularly, in fair weather or foul, she dons the uniform of the Nova Scotia fishing fleet—ungainly oilskins and sou'-wester—and puts out to the fishing grounds near here with her husband and other members of this community.

The boat in which she goes is an open 30-footer. In rough weather, waves break over the craft's bow and spray and wind lash the faces of the crew.

Once on the grounds, nets or trawls, depending on the type of fish for which they are trying, are lowered. About two hours later they are lifted from the sea, heavy, if
