Hoare Shatters Precedent in Naval Review

Covering up his natty uniform with an aviator's flying suit, Sir Samuel Hoare, first sea lord of the British admiralty, is pictured just before he took off in an aeroplane from Hendon aerodrome for a flight to H. M. S. Courageous, naval aircraft-carrier. The first sea lord later landed on the Courageous, cruising off the Isle of Wight, and made a tour of inspection. This was the first time in history that the "big chief" of the British navy has conducted an aerial inspection of the fleet.

Moose Dance Is

well to Men of H. M. C. S. Skeena

As a farewell to men of H. M. C. S. Skeena, an enjoyable dance was held last night in the Moose Hall, a crowd of about two hundred persons being attracted to the affair.
