Building The Highway

Every person in the Prince Rupert district should read the article on the front page of this paper today on the cost of the highway and the difficulties of construction and location. It is a matter that is vital to the city and also to the people of Terrace and other interior points. It also has a national significance that should not be overlooked.

At first glance the cost of the proposed undertaking seems extremely heavy, but the writer of the article seems to have omitted mentioning that the work, if proceeded with, would provide employment for a thousand men for three years and would be a tremendous factor in solving the problem of providing employment for all the people.

The tourist value of the highway was not mentioned in the article. At a time when government money is being extended in advertising the attractions of the country, Prince Rupert has felt that she is not in a position to take advantage of industry as she should owing to the fact that she is not yet on the highway. The same may be said to some extent of the people of the interior for people who drive through that part of the country wish to come as far as Prince Rupert and find they are unable to do so. The steamships would benefit because hundreds of people would drive their cars to Prince Rupert and take them south on the boats. It is safe to estimate that thousands of people would drive to Prince Rupert if they were able to do so.

While the total cost of the undertaking looks very large when it is divided into a three-year program and again divided between the two governments the cost is not very large each year, not more than might be expected on a transcontinental project.

At the present rate of progress the highway will be still under construction when our children are old men and women. By making one brief effort the whole thing could be completed in three or four years and this part of the country would be really a part of British Columbia, something which does not seem to be the case today except when the tax collector sends out his notices.

It is possible that the highway might be completed for less than the amount stated in the article but it must be remembered that the country is rough and construction would be difficult and the lesson of the recent floods is that the lower levels must be avoided wherever possible. Seemingly impossible undertakings have been carried out successfully when those behind them used brains and energy in promoting them and pushing them to fruition.
