SALMON CANNING INDUSTRY

Almost next door to Prince Rupert are located twenty or more salmon canneries most of which are operated with a total disregard to the presence of this city close to them and also without regard to the fact that this is an industry that might give employment to a great many Canadian young people. The chief benefit to the district from these canneries is that they give employment to a great many resident native people—men, women and children—and to a few white fishermen living in the neighborhood. Most of the canners bring in all their supplies from the south, ship their product south to be labelled and distributed and act in every way as if they had a natural right to the fish without owing anything to the district where they are caught.

For years the businessmen of Prince Rupert tried to induce the canners to do the right thing by this city. At one time the Sunnyside cannery bought a good deal of supplies in the city and for one season only the B. C. Packers established a purchasing agent in Prince Rupert. Last fall the Canadian Fishing Company decided to distribute a large part of its catch from Prince Rupert and the Inverness cannery does much of its labelling and distributing direct from the cannery at the mouth of the Skeena. This all shows a little progress.

The Skeena and Naas fisheries belong to this district. They are a natural heritage of the people and no canneries should be allowed to bring in their crews in the spring, put up their pack and then carry away the product without so much as a "by your leave." No other city but a subservient community like Prince Rupert would stand for it.

It is understood that the canners are now asking the government to compel the canning of the fish in the district in which they are caught. If they require privileges of this kind, Prince Rupert, as one of the interested parties should take a hand and oppose all privileges until the canners recognize the fact that the fish they catch belong to this district, that northern fishermen get the first chance in the matter of employment and that the fish be finally labelled and distributed in the district.

The Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce should be consulted by the government and so should the fishermen's association before any changes are made affecting this port. The fisheries have too long been controlled from Vancouver and it is time the north coast was consulted in all matters pertaining thereto.

City Billiard Championship

Competition is to be Held Again This Winter

The city billiard championship is being got under way and, as advertised in another part of this issue, entries are to be handed in at the Canadian Legion Clubrooms by next Saturday.

The handsome cup donated by the Canadian Legion will again be at stake. A meeting of the club billiard championship committee took place yesterday with Jack Prece, C. L. Youngman, Jack Judge and G. Dawes in attendance. While there has been no city league run this year it was felt that the city championship should be conducted. The club has run several club handicaps and these have been very interesting. It is hoped that there will be a good entry list for the city championship. The present holder in Neil Cameron.

Following receipt of entries a meeting of the committee will be held and rules drawn up.
