PIONEERING in 1937

Because the covered wagon has vanished and there is no longer any risk of hostile Indians shooting down white settlers from ambush, it does not follow that the pioneer spirit of our forefathers has disappeared from Canada. Conditions have vastly changed since those early days, but the desire to explore new fields, to open new territories, to improve and then continue to improve, still remains an attribute of Canada's forward-looking leaders in all walks of life. The Imperial Tobacco Company is completing the construction of a new building — an addition to its plant in Montreal. This unit - Building "K" - pioneers by making the most liberal use of Glass-Brick of any building in Canada. It was planned after exhaustive research and study by our architects and engineers, to provide us with the newest and best manufacturing facilities in the world today.

Glass-Brick, heretofore used in Canada only for decorative purposes, now fulfils its true function by providing really sunlit manufacturing floors, where we can make use of the most advanced air conditioning. These floors will be entirely insulated, and so, unaffected by summer's heat or winter's cold. The temperature and humidity will be controlled, and the washed, conditioned air completely changed every ten minutes. These features will also achieve an important advance in the comfort, health and well-being of our employees.

Building "K" is a long stride forward toward the Imperial Tobacco Company's goal perfection! More sunshine, better conditioned air and immaculate cleanliness will all enable us to improve still further the already fine quality of Imperial Tobacco products.
