Gardening

The weather during the past week or two has been distinctly unfavorable to gardening except that it has helped the shade plants such as begonias. With an old fashioned August like this it is hard to know what to grow to get best results. The difficulty is that we do not know in advance what sort of August we shall get. Sometimes we have several weeks of bright sunshine and again we have a soaking time like we have been experiencing this year.

The annual rose and flower show was a big event for many of those interested in gardening. While there was a big showing of sweet peas and many other varieties, there was a noticeable decrease in the number of roses exhibited due to the date of the show being too late for them. In flowering house plants there was a poor showing. Only one geranium was seen and it was not much of a plant. There must have been dozens of better plants in the city but the owners did not take the trouble to put them in the show.

Man in the Moon

Prince Rupert people do not seem to have been interested in the comet that recently lost its tail or in the meteoric shower that followed. If we could only move that cloud curtain aside we might be more interested in astronomy.

Now that Shirley Temple has left British Columbia without visiting Prince Rupert, local picture fans have every reason to be disappointed.

In this wild scramble for armaments evidently Britain is running true to form and will not be behind any other nation when the show-down comes.

House Agent: "Yes, sir, this is a house without a flaw." Algie: "Bai jove! Then what the deuce do you walk on?"

mentioned in the prize lists was a vase of zinnias grown by Robert Gordon in his greenhouse. They were very large and well colored but these flowers are not suitable to the Prince Rupert climate and, as a hot house plant, there are many more beautiful flowers than zinnias that may be grown.

John Shields, who lives in a cottage near the Dyer Apartments had a fine tub of outdoor carnations in the show. Unfortunately there was no class in which they could be placed. However, it was much admired and was a distinct addition to the display. Mr Shields has in his garden the finest crop of peas and scarlet runner beans I have ever seen. They must be nine or ten feet high and covered with pods. The judge of the flower show went down there to see them and was amazed at the fine showing.

Another year the Horticultural Society will have to decide whether it holds its show early or late. It must be earlier if it is to cater to the roses but, if the sweet peas, gladiola and dahlias are to be the outstanding features the show should be a week later than it was this year.

Prince Rupert rose growers should not be unduly worried at having lost a good many trees this last winter. Evidently in almost all parts of Canada there was a big mortality among roses, so this place was not alone in having suffered severe losses. And it must also be noted that a good many Prince Rupert growers did not lose a single rose.

A number of people, including myself, were rather disappointed at being ruled out by the judge at the show for not having entered an exhibit correctly. This will make us all the more careful next year. I was particularly disappointed at John R. Murray not being eligible for first prize because of having one too many in a vase for he had worked faithfully, confining his plants to a single stalk and giving them all the help possible and was really deserving of the prize. I do not claim to be much of a prophet, but I think there will be even keener competition next year than there was this.—H. F. P.

Big Pink Run Developing in Massett Inlet—Prince Charles in-Boeing Plane Goes South.

Reports received at the Dominion Fisheries office in Prince Rupert today give every indication of a heavy run of pink salmon in Massett Inlet. Twenty-two seiners operating in the inlet took ninety thousand fish between them yesterday and the three canneries in operation in the inlet are being kept very busy putting up the fish. On the mainland an exceptionally good run of pinks is beginning to show signs of falling off. The sockeye run is virtually over with the boat average, on the Skeena and Naas Rivers down to ten fish per boat. Fishing with sockeye nets is to end on Friday. That, as usual, will mark the end of packing operations for the year in a number of mainland canneries. Cohoes are showing up in goodly quantities all over the district and there are indications of a substantial run.

A few hours later than usual, C.N.R. steamer Prince Charles, Capt. Dan McKinnon, arrived in port at 1 o'clock this afternoon from Vancouver via the Queen Charlotte Islands and will be here until Saturday night when she will sail on her return south over the same route. The vessel had on board a large number of tourist passengers. Over sixty transfer from here tomorrow to make the trip to Stewart and Anyox and thence to Vancouver on the Prince Rupert which vessel is bringing north some fifty persons who will return south via the Islands on the Charles.

The Douglas flying boat, which has been undergoing repairs at the local dry dock after having accompanied W. E. Boeing's yacht Tacoma on a cruise of local waters, hopped off at 5:45 yesterday afternoon for Seattle with Pilot Clayton L. Scott at the controls.

Three boats sold halibut catches totalling 50,500 pounds at Seattle yesterday as follows: Atlantic, 31,000 pounds, Booth, 8 3/4 and 8c; Merit, 8,500, Whiz, 8 3/4 and 8 1/2c (cod, 1000 pounds, 3c); Lituya, 10,500, San Juan, 9 3/4 and 8 1/2c.

A particularly active patrol is being conducted in Area No. 2 since its closing to halibut fishing at the first of this week. The patrol is centred south of Cape Spencer where poaching violations were said to be unusually prevalent after the closing of the area last parties were organized and his crumpled body, badly gashed and cut, his neck broken and head split open, was found at 6 o'clock the next morning, face downward in the water. First clue to his whereabouts came when an old Indian guide noticed a blue jay darting and flitting about in great excitement. It was not known whether Proctor, who was nimble and husky for his 60 years had suffered a heart attack or had lost his footing in endeavoring to go to the assistance of Ward when he fell into the river.

Armstrong and Smith stood guard all day over the body while waiting for the coroner to arrive from Happy Camp, a small settlement inhabited mostly by Indians. When he finally completed the hazardous journey at 7 p.m. he pronounced the man dead by accident and it was up to the rest of the party to arrange for burial—a difficult problem in that high mountainous country. A crude wooden coffin was made and time for the funeral was set, but at the last moment, after hours of phoning, Proctor's son was located and he sent a hearse and coffin from Fort Morgan, 75 miles distant.

It was a strange and touching scene—that burial up in "the wild country" with a sad group of Indians, who had brought crude bouquets of mountain flowers in tribute to their old friend, and a few Whites.

Doc Proctor, close friend of the Wards, upon whose invitation the Armstrongs made the trip, was a nature lover and poet. He was author of several books of poems, one of which was "The Rodeo" prompted by his days of bronc busting in 1918 with his personal friend, Will Rogers.

order to carry out its service and duty to the people, it must come out of its buildings and its organizations to meet the people and do real things for them. It was in line with the present day attitude to help people and do good.

Dr. R. G. Large, president of the Club, expressed appreciation to Padre Coleman for his outstanding message. Guests at the luncheon, besides the speaker, were Cyril D. Morgan of Vancouver and Dr. Neal Carter, Dr. W. C. Aspinall and W. D. Vance of Prince Rupert.
