As King Farouk Left For Egypt
