Great city and tiny hamlet throughout the British Empire yesterday observed Remembrance Day—the eighteenth anniversary of the declaration of the armistice which ended the Great War. Every Canadian community, large and small, paused for two minutes at 11 a.m. to pay silent tribute to the memory of sixty thousand Canadians who gave up their lives in France between 1914 and 1918. Prince Rupert, too, had fitting observance.

Weather here was exceptionally stormy and entirely unsuitable for the complete observance of the usual memorial rites at the local cenotaph. Therefore, the memorial service was held in the Capitol Theatre prior to a parade to the cenotaph where wreaths were laid at the stone. The parade was in charge of Lieut. Col. S. D. Johnston, officer commanding, First North B. C. and ex-service men, naval and military units, Prince Rupert Boys' Band, Daughters of the Empire and other organizations participated.

In the evening war veterans foregathered at the annual Canadian Legion Armistice Day banquet.

Memorial Service
The memorial service was along the usual lines. There was a fair attendance at the theatre. The proceedings opened with the singing of "O Canada" after which "Cease Fire" was sounded by Bugler Sergeant William Rance. At the striking of 11 a.m. two minutes' silence was observed in memory of the fallen after which "The Last Post" was sounded followed by the singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past." Dr. Dafee then delivered an appropriate address after which the sounding of "Reveille" and the singing of "God Save the King" brought the proceedings to a close.

Dr. Dafee expressed the opinion that, in spite of the present dilemma of the world, there was no necessity for war if there was a change of heart, mind and attitude on the part of men toward their fellowmen and the nations. No social legislation could build a better world out of the present chaotic condition. Legislation could not transform the hearts of men. A process of regeneration was required. Selfishness and indifference must be left behind. Men must turn to God in humility and repentance and surrender their hearts and wills to the Prince of Peace who alone could end war. If those who had fallen in the Great War in defence of righteousness and truth could speak today, the speaker was sure they would say: "Repent and turn to God. He alone can transform our lives and bring about the realization of those high ideals for which we gave our lives." In closing the speaker asked: "Shall we keep faith or continue in the old way?" In the course of his address Dr. Dafee expressed the opinion that nations were justified in maintaining adequate defences. Ushers at the theatre were Sergeants Wigner Bryant and Alex Mitchell.

Placing of Wreaths
Following the service the various units fell in outside the theatre and marched to the cenotaph for the placing of wreaths and saluting of the stone in honor of the memory of the fallen.

The units taking part were: Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve under Lieut. L. H. Haworth. Prince Rupert Boys' Band under leadership of Bandmaster Robert Greenfield. Sea Cadets under Lieut. G. H. Greenwood and Chief Petty Officer Instructor Anslow.

Canadian Legion under President W. M. Brown. Women's Auxiliary of Canadian Legion under Mrs. Hugh Killen. Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, under Mrs. D. Orchard McLeod. Girl Guides under Lieut. Muriel Brewerton. Wolf Cubs under Scoutmaster N. L. Jones. Col. Johnston was assisted in connection with the handling of the parade by Major C. V. Eviatt, Capt. A. E. Parlow and Lieut. J. T. Harvey and Company Sergeant-Major James Hadden. Chief Petty Officer John Gibson, Sergeant J. A. Teng, Private James Watt and Private William Rothwell were detailed as guardians of the stone but, owing to the inclemency of the weather, did not act as such although taking part in the parade.

Lieut. J. T. Hardy, who was escorted by Sergeants Wigner Bryant and Alex Mitchell, placed the wreath on behalf of the First North B. C. Regiment.

VALUE OF NEW CARS

Freezer Designed at Local Experimental Station Accepted By Canadian Pacific

Solves Problem

In Cheaper and More Efficient Carrying of Perishable Products

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Railway refrigerator cars equipped with overhead ice bunkers instead of the prevalent end bunkers are proving a practical solution to the old problem of cheaper and more efficient carrying of perishable products, according to Oscar C. Walker, Chief Supervisor of perishable traffic, Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal. The new type of car was designed by O. C. Young of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station and successful tests were made during the past summer.

Overhead bunkers, said Mr. Walker, who is in British Columbia on one of his frequent inspection trips, effect a decided improvement in temperature distribution, an essential requirement particularly for shippers of quick frozen materials such as berries and vegetables, fish and meats. They increase the load limit of the car so that four cars of the overhead type can carry the load of five cars equipped with the older icing systems and can travel from 1000 to 1500 miles before re-icing as against the 300 to 500 miles of the old-type car.

Experiments have been made in test runs from Vancouver to Winnipeg with frozen British Columbia fish and from Winnipeg to Montreal with fruit in the experimental car, C. P. 289999, Mr. Walker reported, and the tests, supplemented by additional ones by a Chicago packing house, have amply proved the economy and efficiency of the overhead type. The fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture, Dominion, supervising the Western Montreal experimental fruit shipment, placed electrically resistant thermometers in 12 places in the car, and had readings made at every divisional point. The report showed that the highest product temperature was 48 degrees but this was reduced to 37 degrees at destination.

B. C.'s interest in the Canadian Pacific's plan to equip a large block of cars with the overhead type is naturally considerable, the refrigeration expert said, as so many of the province's products can move to eastern markets in proper condition only through effective refrigeration.
