BASIS OF CIVILIZATION

One of the most revealing sidelights on the civil war in Spain was brought out by a newspaper correspondent who was trailing a retreating army across the country, says he said. While men have a choice game margin. The game was feathe Victoria Times in a recent editorial article. Stopping of colors. Although the women are tured by a clash between the opat a little farm to get a drink, the correspondent asked the perfectly willing to use any of his posing hurlers—Dizzy Dean and peasant who lived there on which side he was

The peasant said bluntly that he was on neither side. suits are all used up." Even if the ton made fun of Dean's pitching. He only hoped that both sides would get the fighting over girls bring their own suits, they Yesterday's Big League scores: with and go home, so that he could go ahead with his job of won't get in the water wearing getting the crops in; and he wound up by wishing an eter- them, he went on. Human civilization is a strange growth, and we do not ranges in size from a modest 34; entirely understand how it got started or how it does just as quickly as the smaller manage, in spite of obstacles, to keep progressing; but it sizes. As yet the girls have made Baseball Standings is very clear that its base is the worker and not the war- no complaints, and the head man rior, the man who produces rather than the man who de- claims there should be no reason stroys.

Civilization, that is, does not rest on a base of armies and navies; it rests on the backs of the men who work with their hands, in field or in shop, and it will last just as long as they go on holding it up. They are a greater procession, in the long pages of history, than all the hordes of warriors that ever followed a drum.

They move without glory and without battle flags, municipal courses was granted repoets do not immortalize them and the history books omit cently. The corporation owns nine their names. But for unnumbered generations they have public courses. gone on, tempering the earth to man's habitation, making possible all the graces of living which lift man above the level of the beasts.

The far-called armies melt away, and the winds carry off the crash of their battles. The plain man at the bot-hour in separate matches tom is eternal, and he has the world and all its hopes in his keeping. He makes possible Shakespeare and Beethoven, the Taj Mahal and Rheims Cathedral, and all the glory and marvel of which human effort is capable.

And if, with all of this, he wearily asks the fighting men no objection to L. B. Fishlock, from women golfers, one said: "I'd Eckersley, former Lancashire cricto get out of the way so that he can go on with his jobis he asking too much?

Carpenter of Smithers Nearly Enters Hall of Fame-Locals Out of Practice

Jack Carpenter, star hurler of the Smithers baseball team, al most entered the diamond sport's hall of fame in the game at Smithers last Saturday afternoon with Prince Rupert when he held the coast team hitless until the ninth inning when Bill Lambie came up and spoiled things for + + + + + + + + + + him by clouting out a two-bagger. In spite of this, however, Prince Rupert was still shut out.

The Smithereens nicked Lambie for twelve hits.

In spite of the efforts of the veteran Stan Morin to have the locals put up as good a showing as possible, the Rupert players were loose and decidedly out of practice. They deserved to lose and, indeed, if they do not brace up a bit and keep themselves in better trim in future, they may not be getting bids to any more out of town parties.
