Here are some new pictures of the principal figures in the recent monarchial crisis in England. Discussion has been stirred up anew by the radio broadcast of the Archbishop of Canterbury on Sunday in which he criticized the former King Edward's circle of companions whose "ways of life are alien to the best interests of the people." Now it is said that Edward, furious in spite of anguish and despondency, may reply to the Archbishop's attack. A sharp answer to the head of the Church of England may, it is reliably reported, be returned by the Duke of Windsor to the criticism of his friends as one of the first uses of his personal freedom. Baron Eugene de Rothschild, at whose castle at Enzefeld, near Vienna in Austria, Edward is staying, says that the former King has been deeply stirred by the Archbishop's broadcast. Edward is said to have been suffering from emotional letdown and was highly nervous. However, he made a shopping tour of Vienna yesterday and appeared to be in good spirits. He agreed to pose for news photographers so they could return to their homes for Christmas. Mrs. Simpson, in a telephone conversation with Edward, is reported to have urged him to drep the idea of replying to the criticism of the Archbishop of Canterbury. In the lay-out of pictures Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin is shown at his desk (left), with the former monarch in the uniform of the Seaforth Highlanders at right. Beneath the picture of Westminster are His Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Wallis Simpson.
