The Letter Box

IS SKEPTICAL

Editor, Daily News:—
I read in your paper of local travellers seeing six feet of snow around Mount Shasta, torrential rain in San Luis Obispo Valley and bright sunshine in the orchards all in the same day. That's quite a wonder to see. I lived in California for a few years, and believe you could see snow, rain and sunshine in one day but, for my part, if I ever undertake to see it, I'll take an airplane to go from Mount Shasta to the orange groves of Southern California. To make the trip by bus in one day is hitting the dust too fast for me.

A. DELORME.

EGG PRICES MOVING UP

As Result of Cold Weather—Butter Market is Weak

On account of the cold weather, egg prices are firming up and there have been two or three advances on the local retail market of late. The butter market is weak while flour and sugar prices show little tendency to change.

The severe weather will have the effect of finishing the supply of Brussels sprouts and may also be expected to force up the price of cabbage.

Retail prices current here are as follows:
