Speed Race Forecast Between Two Giant Atlantic Liners

Though the Queen Mary, giant new Cunard liner, failed by less than an hour to win the blue ribbon for speed crossing the Atlantic, experts are of the opinion that she will achieve it, possibly next month. Owners of the French Line's Normandie, however, counter this by announcing that the huge French ship will cut 10 hours from her crossing—and the race between the two juggernauts of the sea is on. The Queen Mary is shown, top, arriving in New York to be greeted by a huge throng of 750,000 people. Below, the Normandie, with engines full speed ahead. It is expected the time will be shortened.
