Spanked Spouse Asks Separation

Hubby Thought More of Books Than of His Family

LONDON, Oct. 21: (CP)-"Wives on take that, you know. You houldn't do it," admonished Masistrate Mullins in matrimonial ourt when Charles Calvert, tea nerchant of Clapham, admitted he and spanked his wife.

According to Doris Calvert, her ausband bought novels for himself nstead of food for her and her hild, and occasionally spanked her. Seeking a separation order she declared that three times the prerious week she had been forced to to short of food although her husand was earning $25 a week. She aid he had one debt of $250 for

"I think it is better to buy books han to spend money on cigarttes and drink, like some men do," said Calvert in admitting he was fond of general literature and paid two dollars a week for new books.

The application was adjourned ine die, the magistrate stating the pair should adjust their differences. He told them that the majority of children who commit crimes come from parents who are at loggerheads with each other.

Richard (Scoon) Bury of the Swift-Canadian Co. returned to the aity on last n'aht's train from a brief business trip to Hazelton.
