Tony's first salvo heard 'round the baseball, world in 1936 came just a little more than a month after the campaign began. Against the Philadelphia Athletics in a 25-2 game, he climaxed a week-end of unprecedented slugging by belting three homers, two of them in succession when the bases were loaded, and a triple which fell just short of a round-tripper with two mates

This prodigious batting spree gave him the American League record of 11 runs batted in in one

Although far behind the leaders in the 1936 season's batting averages, with a mark of .291, Lazzeri ranked third in runs batted in by Moose the Yankees in the easy drive into Armour Salvage the World Series. He brought home 109 tallies.

The World Series

Then the World Series. Old Tony looked pretty helpless at the plate with his bat laid on a lumpy shoulder. But he resumed his recordwrecking and came off with more marks to his credit. After the Yanks dropped the rainy first game to Carl Hubbell, Tony in the second exploded a homer with the bases loaded, tying the feat that occurred only once before in World Series history-off the bat of Elmer Smith of Cleveland in 1920.

Tony and Catcher Bill Dickey coauthored a series record by driving home five runs each that day,! beating the former mark held by nine others, including Lazzeri and Babe Ruth.
