CANADA'S EXPORTS

Canada commenced the present crop year last July with a carryover of 215 million bushels of wheat. At the same date this year it is expected the carryover will not be very much over one hundred millions, according to the monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada just issued. This puts Canada in a much more favorable position for marketing her crop next year, whether it be large or small. As the area in crop is expected to be considerably less than the previous year there should be no serious difficulty in disposing of the wheat crop in several years to come.

The export of lumber has also increased very considerably in British Columbia, according to the same authority. The first three months of 1936 showed an increase of eleven percent over the previous high for those months, 1934. Shipments to Great Britain have been well maintained and to the United States there has been a considerable increase following the recent trade agreement with that country. While the present duty on lumber going into the United States is twice what it was in 1930 it is only half what it was at this time last year.

TRADE EXTENSION

The policy of the Mackenzie King government in making trade treaties has so far been very successful and it is satisfactory to know that the administration is proposing to extend its policy to a number of other countries, including a revision of the Imperial pact which includes trade treaties with Great Britain and other countries of the British Empire.

Canada cannot expect to sell her wheat, lumber and fish, all of which she produces far in excess of requirements, unless she is willing to grant other countries some concessions. Even in motor cars Canada does a large export business but there must be trade concessions to countries which import from us, if we are to expect them to continue buying.

REPORT ON CONVENTION

Prince Rupert Teachers' Association in Session Last Night

The feature of the regular monthly meeting of the Prince Rupert Teachers' Association last evening was the report of the annual convention held in Vancouver during Easter week. The main report was given by W. W. C. O'Neill with J. S. Wilson supplementing it.

A tremendous amount of work was done at the various sectional meetings. The revision of courses of study had been under way for months and the report of the chairmen of the committees showed that the teachers were very much alive to the need for bringing the curriculum up-to-date and so fit the child of today for the work of tomorrow. No longer was the school to be a place where children were to be taught phases of subjects that they might not learn elsewhere. The school must prepare the child for life. This was the motive behind the plan for the revision of the curriculum.

Mr. O'Neill also reported on the various committee meetings he had attended in his capacity as geographical representative and also as a member of the elementary teachers' department. He was glad that J. S. Wilson had been elected vice-president of the elementary teachers' department and also a representative on the board of the "B. C. Teacher," the official organ of the federation. The report covered some of the discussion of the draft bill which was, from the purely business point of view, the main item of the convention.

Mr. Wilson expressed his appreciation of the honor done in his being appointed vice-president. He urged the local teachers to consider that the success of the department depended upon the contribution that each teacher might make.

Votes of thanks were accorded the speakers for their comprehensive reports and for the efficient representation that they had given in their attendance at the numerous activities of the convention.

The Letter Box

RE "CLEAN UP WEEK"

Editor, Daily News:
It was fine to read in one of the local papers that there was not a dirty lot in the city after the campaign for a thorough clean up.

But there has been one little spot that has been overlooked and that is the spot between the old Armory and the Public Library and this spot contains the honorable and battered and battle-scarred remains of an old howitzer or 13 point field gun. It is hard to know which now and it presents a pathetic and unsightly appearance. It is neither meant to be seen or heard and no one appears to have any use for it except swarms of dogs.

Who is responsible for this military relic anyhow? The local military? The Canadian Legion? The City? The Library? The Museum? I would suggest (the suggestion of many others also) that a small subscription be taken up to purchase a pot of paint, paint it up, have a suitable tablet inscribed and placed on this poor old gun and have it taken up to the new armory.

The gun is now just like a lot of us old soldiers, just a battered relic, no one has any further use for us.

It sure is symbolic. Will you please publish this, Mr. Editor, and see what can be done for this poor old eyesore.
Yours Truly,

J. HEMSWORTH.
P.S.—Another suggestion—When it is fixed up, have it taken to the C. N. R. park across the road and placed in a suitable position for the coming tourists to admire. Major Burbank or the superintendent would be "tickled to death," I'm sure, to give permission.

The Giants have only a scant mathematical lead over the Reds. The Braves advanced from seventh into sixth place ahead of the Phillies.

The New York Yankees kept in stride but half a game behind by winning over the lowly St. Louis Browns.
