INSURING SECURITY

Chancellor of Exchequer Tells British Conservative Party Of Powerful Air Force

TALKS OF TRADE
Revision of Ottawa Agreements Necessary—Question of Mandated Territory Discussed

LONDON, Oct. 3:—At the annual conference next week of the British Labor Party a resolution will be presented supporting the general British rearmament program but reserving the right to criticize the government's plans.

MARGATE, Eng., Oct. 3:—Chief speaker yesterday at the annual conference of the British Conservative party, Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, dealt with the important subject of defence and rearmament. He declared that Great Britain was developing an air force which would be second to none and which would be the most formidable deterrent to war which could be devised. Adequate naval strength was also being provided and the army, while trifling in comparison with the strength of some of the European nations, was most modernly equipped. The Chancellor emphasized that the policy of his government was to arm for peace and security and not for aggression. He appealed to the Labor party to support the government's rearmament program and policy of defence. Mr. Chamberlain also expressed the view that regional pacts with European neighbors would also be an aid in preserving peace.

Turning to the subject of trade, the Chancellor said that the Ottawa agreements had not worked out in every way as had been expected and, when the time came for renewal, there would need to be some revisions. They had, however, given a new starting point for interchange of views between the various parts of the Empire. He believed in the policy of Imperial preferences.

Mr. Chamberlain spoke in place of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin who is resting in the country. The Chancellor stated that the Premier expected to be in shape to cope with the huge problems which faced him by the time Parliament reassembled. For some time there has been talk of Mr. Baldwin retiring and being succeeded by Mr. Chamberlain.

Scott and Guthrie Plane Alone Completes Course To Johannesburg

JOHANNESBURG, Oct. 3:—Up to last night, C. W. A. Scott and his companion, Giles Guthrie, were still the only ones who had finished the course in the Southampton to Johannesburg air race. Other planes, forced down for various causes, were feverishly endeavoring to get into the air in time to finish within the time limit and thus share in the prize money but it seemed improbable that they would be able to do so. The time of Scott and Guthrie for the 6000-mile course was 52 hours and 56 minutes or an average of 123 miles per hour.

Mandated Territory
At Thursday's meeting of the party conference, the government was asked for a definite statement on what its policy might be in regard to mandated territory. Sir Samuel Hoare, the principal speaker that day, intimated that the government considered the question of ceding its mandated territory to other nations a non-discussable matter.
