THE COSY CORNER

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

Social Note

Mrs. Holby left Montreal on November 3rd, en route for Prince Rupert, after an enjoyable visit to her daughter.

ROYAL ROMANCE

Archduke Ferdinand Charles Renounces Rank—Weds Commoner
Vienna, Nov. 8.—Archduke Ferdinand Charles, nephew of Emperor Francis Joseph, who recently renounced his rank and all privileges as a member of the Imperial family, has married in Switzerland the daughter of Hofrat Czuber, a professor of engineering. The Archduke wished to renounce his rank in 1903 to marry this young woman, but the Emperor refused his permission. The marriage, however, is now with his Majesty's consent, and he has granted his nephew an annuity of 40,000 crowns. The Archduke has assumed the surname of Burg, and will reside in Switzer, land.

ELOPED WITH A MINER

Daughter of Montana Millionaire Ran Off and Was Married
Helena, Mont., Nov. 8.—At the risk, her friends claim, of being disinherited by her father, Thomas Cruz, Miss Marie Cruz, who a few months ago obtained a divorce from Alvar O'Brien, a New York society leader, on the grounds of non-support, has eloped with Harry C. Cotter, a Butte miner, and was married at Boulder, a pleasure resort near Helena.

DECALOGUE FOR WIVES

"How to be Happy Though Married," By a Successful Wife

Here are Madame Maeterlinck's ten commandments for wives, by the practice of which she has become a successful wife, "under the most difficult circumstances."
"1. Always bear in mind that the wife is the inseparable half of the only complete human unit, in which two small, and imperfect individualities have become merged in a large and perfect one."
"2. Each half of the wedded whole retains special functions; yours are to discern; to anticipate, to yield, to cheer, to soothe—and thus to strengthen."
"3. Never trust to hirelings the essentials of your husband's physical well-being; understand, and frequently practice, the art of selecting and preparing his food."
"4. Be sure each day that his garments are whole and clean and suited to the season."
"5. Constitute yourself an infallible barometer whereby to forecast and render harmless those electrical disturbances peculiar to the married state."
"6. Be to your husband's dark moods the subtle, unsuspected antidote; to his joyous mood the companion spirit of joy."
"7. Save your caresses until you perceive that his dinner has been without a flaw; kisses to a hungry man are like froth to a parched tongue."
"8. Your tongue for assent; for argument use only your eyes."
"9. When your husband has an attack of gout, deprecate the art of dancing."
"10. If you would convince your husband that you are a better actress than Bernhardt, a better dancer than Pavlova, prove to him that you are a better cook than M. Escoffier."

Cinnamon Gems

Two cups flour, one level tablespoon sugar, one-half level teaspoon salt, two level teaspoons baking powder, two level teaspoons cinnamon, one cup milk, two eggs, two tablespoons lented butter. Sift together the flour, sugar, salt, baking powder and cinnamon. Add the milk gradually, then the eggs well beaten and the butter. Beat well and bake in buttered gem pans in a moderate oven.

ITEMS OF SPORT!

Jack Johnson is not an uncouth and unscrupulous fighter of the Battling Nelson or Wolgast type. But the way in which he uses his great strength (with the possible exception of Gunner Moir he is the strongest of living pugilists—even Jeffries, that mountainous man, could not outwrestle him) in the clinches and does not commend itself to those spectators who are able to see what is happening.

He has a trick of knocking down the upper arm muscle of an opponent, which is worthy of the cleverest exponent of the jujitsu, and, depending as it does on an exact knowledge of the spots where the nerves approach the surface, not only irritates his opponent, but also speedily destroys the elasticity of his biceps. Then, again, he has always made adroit use of his tongue in championship contests. His bitter-sweet taunts, uttered in a purring voice and with an infantile smile, caused Burns to lose his temper and even impaired the imperturbability of Jeffries.

As regards the rest of his system of tactics, subtlety—amounting to obsecurity—is perhaps the characteristic feature. Speed without haste and an unerring judgment of distance—qualities which distinguish the artist from the artisan in the boxer's abbreviated sphere of activity—are always apparent in his actions. So much is manifest—but all the rest is so veiled in obscurity that those who are accustomed to the plain, straightforward tactics of the English style cannot grasp the secrets of his effectiveness.

They say, for example, that he has not a punch in either hand. That is because they do not see how the shifting of his weight from one foot to the other supplies all the force required for the leisurely lightning of his hooks and jabs. Again, like all the best American champions and unlike our English champions, he knows that two or three comparatively light blows to the same useful spot may do more to break down an opponent's resisting power than the most spectacular punch.

For this and other reasons it is customary to say that his style is essentially defensive. The description is correct, no doubt, in so far as it implies that he leaves the bulk of the leading to his opponent. The boxer who leads must always leave himself open to some extent, and if the defender anticipates the form of the attack and delivers his counter-stroke quickly enough he gains an advantage which may, of course, prove decisive.

A certain power of physical mimicry (as though he could see into the other man's brain-pan) and an extraordinary swiftness of co-operation between eye and hand enable the negro champion to gain this advantage more often than any other heavyweight boxer the writer has seen. It is astonishing how often his counter gets home before his opponent's lead; herein lies the veiled effectiveness and obscure distinction of his style. His favorite counter is an accurate and abstruse right uppercut; a blow that apparently comes out of the nowhere into the here, and, as Burns knows only too well, is so forcible that no gu d can prevent it from jarring terribly.

The one weak point in his physique seems to be his stomach, that instrument of unaccustomed pleasures for a colored Texan brought up on the nutritious but unenlivening corn cake. Johnson would have us believe that he rather likes a good stiff jolt in that particular place. But he takes such pains—even in exhibition bouts—to protect it with his elbows that we must decline to regard the evidence of our eyes as a malicious libel.
