HAS LOST FACE

Japan has already lost "face" in the war against China simply through inability to drive the "hordes of Chinese soldiers" from Shanghai in two months of fierce fighting. According to a writer in the New Republic, the Japanese could not imagine a Japanese army being held by the more or less unorganized and untrained Chinese forces. They felt themselves invincible and now they find that they are not. The Chinese have learned a most important lesson and that is that they are able to stand up against armed Japanese.

The writer of the article says the chief danger is that China may become too confident and abandon the strategy which was planned. It was to fight and retreat, drawing the Japanese farther and farther into the country until their lines were pulled out thin and vulnerable. In the meantime, the Japanese are using up valuable men, guns and ammunition and spending much money in carrying on a war which is leading them nowhere.

What Japan hoped for and confidently expected was a quick and decisive victory which would give them control of the country and enable them to dictate terms. This hope is not being fulfilled and the likelihood is that it will not be fulfilled. The final summing up of this writer is that, even if Japan does win, she loses anyway. She may even dictate terms of peace and occupy half of China but she will end up so weak that her future is in jeopardy. And then there is the uncertainty of Russia.

JAPANESE MIGRATION

While Japanese have always been ready and willing to come to this coast they do not seem to care to settle in Manchuria or Korea. China is already overpopulated so that country can hardly become an outlet for Japanese emigrants. All Japan can hope for is to make the Chinese hewers of wood and drawers of water for their Japanese masters. Evidently the Chinese know this and the knowledge is the chief inspiration giving them courage to defend their country.

It has been suggested that, if Japan should conquer China without great difficulty, she would seize islands on the coast and gradually extend her island kingdom to include possibly some of the islands now under European control. Evidently part of her plan is to commence the work of driving Europeans out of the Orient.

With Britain not prepared and with United States pretty well imbued with the neutrality idea, there is no sea force to prevent Japan doing as she likes with her navy but the Chinese army is at present the stumbling block. It has shown surprising strength and that sacrificial effort may prove to be the turning point in the Orient which will curb the growing and dangerous power of Nippon.

WAS IT MANIPULATED?

People are wondering whether or not the recent stock depression was manipulated by large industrial forces that are opposed to the policies of President Roosevelt. There seems to be little change in commodity markets or in the production of industrial plants, so far at any rate. It is just possible that the Roosevelt policies had nothing whatever to do with market conditions but that international uncertainty was the ruling factor.

"It's great to have a steady job"

says TOM LANG

"THREE years ago I was getting only two months' work a year. Kept my missus scratching to get us enough to eat and a few clothes for the kiddies. But now that I'm working steady our troubles are over. And the way I figure it we're helping a lot of you other boys around here, too. Jack Mills works in a shoe factory and we've bought new shoes for the whole family in the last two months. Bill Thomas is a cutter; Henry Jameson works in a textile plant — and we've been able to buy some badly-needed new clothes. We've done a bit of painting — Dick Morris works in a paint factory. We've bought some new furniture for the boys' room and it was made by the people Sid McRae works for.

"No wonder you fellows have steady jobs, too, because there are 33,000 others at work in the same industry as myself and we are all spending money on the things you other men make.

"Or look at it the other way. I work in an automobile plant and nine men on this street have bought new cars this year. That's why I'm making steady money and it has a whole lot to do with why you are, too!"

Tom Lang is right, but he might have carried his conversation a step further. Canada's busy factories are buying millions of dollars worth of raw materials and machinery each year and that means a steady demand for the products of Canada's farms, forests, factories and mines.

Healthy, growing industries are vital to the welfare of Canada; a personal benefit to every Canadian.

There are 18,000 workers in Canada's automobile plants, and 15,000 employed in the 202 parts manufacturers' plants. An average of four to a family means over 150,000 people whose prosperity depends in whole or in part on the activities of the motor car builders. Add as well the employees of railways who live by traffic and you have a huge cross-section of Eastern Canada — a group of people who contributed much of the $40,000,000 spent last year for Western farm products. Therefore, all Canada, West as well as East, is vitally interested in a sound and well-supported Canadian Automobile Industry.

For statistical and further information about this industry, write to Automotive Industries, 1000 Lansdowne Building, Toronto.
