The Baby Gets Well

We have a very nice letter from Mr. and Mrs. C. O. of this city with a snap of their little daughter. "She has been raised so far on Pacific Milk," says the letter, "and has done wonderfully well. Everybody admires her, so we wish to let you know what Pacific Milk has done for her. She was sick from the time she was born until we began giving her Pacific Milk, and now at nine months her weight is 21 lbs. 7ozs."

Starchy summer meals encourage tooth decay. It is so easy to neglect exercise of teeth and gums. Nature says chew! Wrigley's gum combines necessary chewing with cool long-lasting flavor. Dentists recommend it as excellent for children too!

AFTER EVERY MEAL

FINE FOR THE TEETH

George R. Matthews of Vancouver provincial secretary of the British Columbia Retail Merchants' Association, is a visitor in the city.

Bernice Palmer says . . .

I have never owned a car and probably never will. It has always been a sort of boast with me that I did things just a little differently than other people but just how differently I never truly realized until I began to be swamped with statistics by a salesman determined to beat down my resistance.

For instance, did you know in the United States alone, approximately 30 million cars are registered? Imagine! I am one in 30 million. Very exclusive if you ask me.

And did you know that if all these 30 million cars were lined up end to end they would reach around the world at the equator three times? Imagine getting caught in a traffic jam like that!

Or if 26 cars were placed abreast fender to fender and bumper to bumper, they would form a solid mass clear across the United States from Atlantic City to the Golden Gate. That might be pretty good advertising for the Golden Gate World's Fair but a bit hard on any buildings that might stand between. However, a clever salesman like that probably had it all figured out.

He also told me that if it was decided to stage a review (the must have got that idea from Mussolini) it would only take 34 years, 24 hours a day, for these cars to pass a given stand. Now just imagine standing, or even sitting for that matter, 34 years to choose a car. You'd think they would change the model in that time.

And there was also the matter of old tires. He waxed quite eloquent on that subject. It seems that each car has four wheels and each wheel requires a tire—to say nothing to spare. Now just suppose all these cars travelling all these years had to be re-tired, and every one put his tires, all five of them, on the same heap, it would form a hollow column reaching 14,205 miles into the ozone. A veritable tower of Babel! Maybe he had something there. But when he decided to push this tower over after going to all the trouble of building, why, I just gave up. I'd rather play with blocks any day. They're safer. Imagine stacking 14,205 miles of tires and then wanting to knock them down again just to prove a point. And it would be just my luck to find my tire on the very top of the heap. He said I'd have to look in Central Asia for it.

I didn't buy that car. It would take too long to choose, and besides, I never did have any luck at finding things, or working out mathematical problems.
