Fascist Dictatorship Is Set Up In Brazil; Bloodless Coup In Rio

All Legislative Bodies Dissolved and Payments on Foreign Obligations Dissolved—Army and Politicians Behind Vargas But All Civilians Not in Accord

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 12:—A virtual dictatorship has been set up in Brazil by President Getulio Vargas who has closed the national congress, state legislatures and municipal councils, decreeing a new and absolute constitution. The President is supported by army and many political leaders but there is considerable civilian opposition. Military commanders have been established as governors. A tight censorship has been imposed. It was a bloodless coup.

The new form of government in Brazil under which President Vargas has set himself up as dictator is modelled in many respects after the corporate system employed by totalitarian European nations.

President Vargas announces that pending reorganization of the country's economic system, payment of interest on foreign debts is suspended. In view of this the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday decided to suspend provisionally all transactions in Brazilian securities.

Italian officials at Rome are reported to hail the change as "another nation going Fascist."

Remembrance Day Observed In Prince Rupert With Fitting Ceremony And Large Turn-Out

Fine clear weather, if chilly, favored Prince Rupert's observance of Remembrance Day. On the nineteenth anniversary of the Armistice which brought the Great War to a close, there was a large turn-out to honor the memory of those who fell during the conflict in the service of their country. Never was there finer weather for an Armistice Day here and this permitted the full ceremony of Remembrance being conducted at the cenotaph. There was a parade from Third Avenue and Third Street, along Third Avenue, down Sixth Street and along Second to the stone at the Court House grounds. Ex-service persons, naval and militia units, Prince Rupert Boys' Band Sea Cadets, Boy Scouts, Canadian Legion Women's Auxiliary, Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire and members of other organizations participated in the parade. An impressive address by Bishop G. A. Rix was the feature of the service at the cenotaph. Wreaths were laid by various organizations. Thus Prince Rupert joined with the rest of Canada from Pacific to Atlantic and from international border to the Arctic Ocean, metropolis and hamlet alike, in honoring the memory of 60,000 soldiers from this Dominion who gave their lives in the conflict.

The parade of veterans was the largest since the cenotaph was established here. There were some seventy-five in the march with J. S. Wilson, secretary of the Canadian Legion, in charge. Having served overseas, Mrs. Alex McRae and Mrs. F. A. MacCallum, fell in at the head of the Legion members. Then came a detachment of the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve in charge of Lieut. Orme Stuart; detachment of the 102nd Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, under Capt. A. G. Rix; Boys' Band, under Bandmaster Robert Greenfield; Sea Cadets, under Sub. Lieut. Joe Landry; Canadian Legion Women's Auxiliary; Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, and Loyal Order of Moose. The parade was in charge of (Continued on page five)

Ramsay MacDonald, thrice Prime Minister of Great Britain, who passed away peacefully at sea Tuesday night while on a trip towards South America which he had hoped might help him in regaining failing health, will be brought home to his beloved Lossiemouth and windswept Moray Firth where, in the tiny cemetery of Soynie Kirk, his remains will be laid beside those of his wife, Margaret, who he often said "guided and inspired me at all times." The body of the statesman will be buried among his "ain folk" by whom he was called "Jim" and not "Ramsay."

The former Premier's family yesterday declined an offer that he be buried in Westminster Abbey. The sub-dean of the Abbey, Canon Vernon Storr, said that the family had expressed appreciation of the Abbey authorities' offer but they felt they must refuse because it was wished that the burial take place in native Lossiemouth.
