Gardening

Reports on the peony bloom in the city shows that while there have, as there always will be, plants that do not bloom and some plants will lose their buds owing to late moving or to other reasons, bloom this year is good. The finest peony plant I have seen so far was one in T. McClymont's garden. was a pink, covered with prairie people say they grow, but what she writes:which I have not seen. Mr. and Mrs. McClymont have been gardshow late comers how to do a great nany things and one of these is growing peonies.

He is getting the place into a high state of cultivation and the results show that he knows what he is doing. His garden peas are in bloom and he has a good showing of pole beans. His sweet peas are also excellent.—H. F. P.
