would not permit them to retire. Earlier in the day they had been crowned in historic Westminster Abbey by the Archbishop of Canterbury before 7700 bejewelled, rich-robed peers, peeresses, members of the royalty, House of Commons and Dominions. The procession to and from the Abbey was lined by hundreds of thousands of spectators in the greatest display of color, pageantry and loyalty the world has ever known.

Following the Coronation, the King broadcast a message to the Empire, saying as follows:

"It is with a very full heart I speak to you tonight. Never before has a newly crowned king been able to talk to al lhis peoples in their own homes on day of his corona-

"Never has the ceremony itself had so wide significance for the Dominions are now free and equal partners with this ancient kingdom. I felt this morning that the whole Empire was in very truth gathered within the walls of Westminster Abbey. "I rejoice that I can now speak to you all wherever you may be, greeting old friends in distant lands and, as I hope, new friends in those parts where it has not yet been my good fortune to go.

"In this personal way the Queen and I wish health and happiness to you all and we do not forget at this time of celebration those who are living under the shadow of sickness. Their example of courage and good citizenship is always before us and to them I would send a special message of sympathy and good cheer. I cannot find words with which to thank you for your love and loyalty to the Queen and myself.

"Your goodwill in the streets today, your countless messages from overseas and from every quarter of these islands has filled our hearts to overflowing. I will only say this that, if in the coming years, I can show my gratitude in service to you that is the way above all others I should choose.

"To many millions the crown is a symbol of unity by grace of God' and by will of the free peoples of the British Commonwealth. I have assumed that crown. Indeed your King is vested for all time with the duty of maintaining its honor and integrity.

"The Queen and I will always keep in our hearts the inspiration of this day. May we ever be worthy of the goodwill which I am proud to think surrounds us at the outset of my reign. I thank you from my heart and may God bless you all."
