Skeena Rising as Most Extreme Heat Wave in Years Persists

TERRACE, June 11:-Terrace has been and still is experiencing a heat wave. The skies are quite! clear of clouds each day and the heat is only tempered by an occasional light movement of air On Tuesday the maximum temper ature reached 95 in the shade The last time this figure wa reached was in July 1931 and has only been exceeded once in have been kept. This was on August 1, 1927, when the maxi 1 mum was 98.

The river has been steadily rising during the past week until Wednesday when the freshet had begun to alarm those who live by the river side and who ex perienced disaster, or near disaster, last year. This year it is realized that erosion and destruction might easily start just where it left off June 1936, as the water crept up and up on those farms which were tottering on the bank in imminent peril. Those who lost land, hard won from the forest have spent an anxious week in fear of losing more.

There is an area containing about a dozen farms, just south lof Terrace, which is in great danger of being cul off on an isl and. The families concerned have sent a petition to the government and are awaiting anxiously for Isomething to be done about it.

Son of Local Woman Engineer Of Great Stream-lined Locomotive

Walter Service, son of Mrs. Peter Black of the Central Hotel, was the engineer of a giant new 5171/2-ton stream-lined locomotive when it made its maiden run a few days ago on the Northern Pacific Railway from Pasco, Wash., to Spokane. New engines of this "mallet" type are being placed on this run to speed up the service both in passenger and freight handling.

Towering over all other locomotives which have been used on the line, the new type of engine is 127 feet long and 16 feet four inches high. Stream-lined to the last degree, it has 12 69-inch drivers, six on each side. It can haul passenger trains at a speed of 70 miles per hour.

Despite its tremendous weight and size the engine is easier on the tracks because of its flexibility and weight distribution than the smaller engines. The bases of the old engines are rigid, while the frame of the mallet is divided, which , makes the blow struck by the engine against the rails while rounding curves much lighter.

Gazing into the firebox is like a short glimpse of Dante's inferno as the blast of heat rushes through the door. The firebox grate area is 201/2 feet by 10 feet with enough area to seat 24 people at tea. The combustion chamber is nine feet in diameter and ten feet long. Has Feeder

Coal is fed the engine through an automatic stoker or perpetual motion corkscrew which carries the coal from the tender, crushes it if necessary and pours it on the apron which juts into the firebox. Steam is used to distribute the coal from the apron to any point in the firebox the fireman desires Seven jets are provided, each operated separate from the others to put the coal at any point in the box.
