MUST BE MODERATE

Questions of wages and prices of products have been much under discussion as a result of the shutdown in the tomato industry in the south. A million dollars worth of tomatoes have been raised but the price set for the product by the Marketing Board was too high for the canners to operate profitably and the raisers claimed that they could not sell their product for less when they had to pay the wages set by the Industrial Relations Board. The result is that much of the fruit has been spoiled.

The danger in all these arbitrary setting of wages and prices is that the cost of operating in the province becomes so high that competition from other Canadian provinces cannot be met. In Ontario they pay lower wages than in British Columbia and in Quebec the wages are still lower. British Columbia workers have to compete with these cheap workers with disastrous results in some cases. What is needed is a minimum wage law for the whole of Canada and even then Canadians have to compete with the cheap labor of Europe and Japan.

THREE THINGS NEEDED

According to "The Canadian Unionist," published by the All-Canadian Congress of Labor, three things are needed, a new viewpoint, a new spirit and a new method. Discussing this, the journal says:

"The new viewpoint will be the good of the people as a whole, and not that of the individual bent upon his own enrichment at the expense of his fellow-men. It will be recognized that the people of a country have the first claim on the goods produced in that country, a preferred right, and that until the necessities of life are provided on a just basis to every individual within its borders, no privileged person will get the luxuries.

The new spirit will be one of unselfishness and brotherhood. It will allow no man to enjoy the good things of life as long as others are starving through no fault of their own. It will demand from men an active interest in the welfare of their fellow-citizens. The whole aim of productive effort will be the promotion of the common good; instead of trying to get wealth and power for himself, a man possessed by the new spirit will strive to make his part of the world and ultimately all the world a fit habitation for mankind.

"The place to start is right here in Canada; the time to start is now. If the new viewpoint and the new spirit can be gained, the new method will soon be found. If it is not already invented, individual and collective efforts will be put forth in that direction. Up to the present time, inventive genius has been applied wholly to ways of making things more efficiently; the same genius will find ways of distributing them to meet human needs, as soon as the demand for the new method makes itself felt.

Power, displacing human energy, has produced huge supplies of commodies, and bread-lines. The latter by-product of power must now be made to disappear forever, and humanity begin to enjoy the fruits of its intelligence.

ST. LOUIS, August 18 (Canadian Press)—Pittsburg Pirates defeated the St. Louis Cardinals in the latter stages of a class 4 to 3 ball game yesterday to hold their margin of leadership in the National League at five full games over the New York Giants who downed the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Cleveland Indians lost to the St. Louis Browns in the American League and dropped deeper into second place below the New York Yankees, now being eight-and-a-half games down. The St. Louis Browns, as a result of the victory, are now on even terms for seventh place with the Philadelphia Athletics who dropped both ends of a double-header to the Boston Red Sox.

Henry Armstrong Wins Third Concurrent Ring Title With Unpopular Call Over Ambers

NEW YORK, August 17: (CP)—Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles negro, hammered out a fifteen round decision over Lou Ambers, last night to take the world's lightweight championship and become the first man in ring history to hold three titles at one and the same time. Armstrong already held the feather and welterweight crowns.

The decision was unanimous on the part of Referee Billy Cavanaugh and two judges although heartily booed by the crowd of 18,000 roaring fight fans which was completely won over by the game stand of Ambers who entered the ring on the short end of the betting odds with expert opinion generally expecting Armstrong to be an easy winner. Ambers put up a cagey fight, gave Armstrong plenty to think about and maintained his record of never having suffered a knock-out in his career.

Ambers was knocked down twice for short periods—the first time at the end of the fifth round from a right to the jaw when he took the count of one as the bell sounded, coming to quickly—the second time in the sixth round when he apparently, merely slipped.

Armstrong, who showed a tendency to become excited towards the end from anxiety to deliver a knockout, lost three rounds on account of low blows but, despite that, was able to carry the decision. He carried the fight to Ambers almost throughout and had the champion against the ropes a great deal defending himself. However, despite his vaunted strength and power, he was unable to visibly hurt Ambers who would either slip out and dance away or tie him up. Ambers took countless blows directed for the body on his forearm. Armstrong, in return, took many stiff ones around the jaw.

It was one of the most actional fights which has been seen in many a day in Madison Square Garden. Neither fighter spared any effort and there was not a dull round. There was leather throwing aplenty for the crowd which was on its feet toward the closing stages.

Both fighters were still fresh at the end of the fifteenth round and neither showed any particular marks. The courageous battle which Ambers put up will undoubtedly entitle him to a return bout. He was given a great hand as he climbed out of the ring. The decision was protested both by Ambers and his manager.

It was a hot and sultry night although Madison Square Garden was cool and comfortable. The gate amounted to close to $100,000. Ambers, as the defending champion, gets the bulk of the gate.
