LARGE SHARE OF TOTAL TRADE OF THREE NATIONS INVOLVED

apply to Canadian lumber imported into the United States.

It has been possible, says the text, to confine concessions to lumber of certain values and certain widths and thus confer definite benefits on United States lumber without increasing competition which the Canadian industry experiences from other foreign countries supplying lumber in substantial quantities to the United Kingdom market.

The agreement between the United Kingdom and the United States provides reductions, for the most part moderate, on a wide range of manufactured articles on practically all of which Canada has no bound margin of preference. In line of manufactured goods which Canadian exporters send to the United Kingdom, they will continue to receive preferential advantage over United States competitors. Canadian export trade in many lines will benefit from the extension to Canada of lower rates of duty accorded by the United States to a wide range of British goods.

Under Article I. of the Canada-United States trade agreement, the United States agrees to give Canadian exporters the lowest duty rates accorded goods imported from any foreign country.

Concessions in the new agreement relate to 222 items and sub-items of the United States tariff. The total value of imports from Canada in 1937 under these amounted to $327,505,484 of total importation from Canada—$394,240,823. Therefore, they cover eighty-three per cent of Canadian sales to the United States in 1937.

Whereas the 1935 trade agreement provides for reductions in United States duties affecting sixty-three items and sub-items of the United States tariff, concessions in the new agreement include 129 new reductions in rates of duty on items and sub-items which represent trade valued in 1937 at $72,981,492. In addition there are forty-one bindings of existing United States rates of duty including thirty-two rates reduced in the 1935 trade agreement. The total trade represented by these bindings of existing rates was placed in 1937 at $51,843,682. Finally, existing free entry is bound in respect to thirty-two items and sub-items, total trade under which in 1927 was $202,680,310.

Included among the Canadian products for which a fifty per cent duty reduction is obtained from the tariffs established by the Tariff Act of 1930 are lumber, cattle, milk, potatoes, pickled or salted cod, smoked whole cod, fresh or frozen halibut, salmon, pickled or salted salmon, whiskey, pulp board in rolls and many other lines.

In addition to the above on which United States duties have been reduced fifty per cent, valuable reductions in United States duties have been secured on a variety of other important Canadian products including silver fox furs, fresh or frozen whole cod, fresh or frozen fillets of cod, smoked fillets of cod, boneless salt cod, pickled or salted herrings, frozen mackerel, fresh water fish and many other lines.

The most important agricultural concessions to Canada relate to live cattle.

The duty on fresh or frozen salmon is one cent per pound instead of one and a half cents under the 1935 agreement.

The duty on pickled or salted salmon, including the mild cured product of British Columbia, will be 12½ per cent ad valorem instead of twenty per cent ad valorem.

The reduction of fresh or frozen halibut from two cents to one cent secured in 1935 is confirmed.

The new agreement continues concessions on lumber contained in 1935 agreement and removes the discriminating quota on Douglas Fir and Western Hemlock.

The agreement binds free duty on red cedar shingles for the quantity imported in any year equivalent to thirty per cent of the average domestic consumption in United States during the three preceding years. On imports in excess of this quantity, the United States reserves the right to impose a duty or tax not exceeding 25c per square.

Free entry to United States of pulp and newsprint is broadened.

Canada undertakes to remove the special excise tax of three per cent now levied on duty paid value of all imports into Canada under the tariff other than the British preference.

Concessions by Canada on agricultural and fisheries products parallel important reductions in United States duties on Canadian exports of natural products.

The existing Canadian duty on most types of fresh, salted, pickled, smoked, dried or boneless fish is reduced from three quarters of a cent to half a cent per pound.

The three nations take rights to control shipments of arms and war materials with reduced mutual tariff rates on such articles as aluminum, zinc, rubber and vegetable oils which United States imports.

Tariff concessions under the Canadian-American and Anglo-British agreements will go into effect on January 1, 1939. The agreements will have initial terms of three years and may continue in force indefinitely thereafter subject to termination by either government on six months' notice.

The two agreements were said by a statement made on the occasion of their signature to cover products "which altogether make up a very large share of the total trade" between the participating nations. "These agreements are, of course, not one-sided," said the statement. "They would stimulate mutually profitable expansion of trade in both directions."

The United States Department of State, following the signing of the trade agreements with Canada and the United Kingdom, said they contained concessions which would greatly benefit industry and agriculture. "Substantial concessions on farm products have been secured from the United Kingdom," the Department of State said.

The treaties were signed in an historic ceremony in the East Room of the White House at Washington by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister, for Canada; Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, and Arnold Overton, second Secretary of the British Board of Trade for the United Kingdom, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull for the United States.

Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard are shown with their daughter, the infant Princess Beatrix, on the gallery of Soestdijk Palace, The Hague, as they showed the baby to a deputation of Netherlanders. The occasion was a reception to aged people held at the royal palace.

was suitably decorated for the occasion. The speaker took as his text "Holding the torch high" against the spirit of selfishnes and evil doing. Appropriate hymns were sung and there was a piano solo "In Flanders Fields." The two minutes silence and "God Save the King" closed the service. Rev. Frank Bushfield was in charge with Mrs. Bushfield at the piano.

The car ferry, for use of the Canadian National Railways on Okanagan Lake, which is to be built at the local dry dock, will provide something like $50,000 in wages alone at the local yard, it is estimated. The staff, as a result of the job, will probably be increased to well over one hundred men as compared with some thirty-five or so at present. Delivery of the steel for the new craft has yet to be made. It is expected actual construction will get under way soon after the New Year.

Bulger's

Not the largest stock in the world of course but we try rather to get small quantities of many lines rather than a lot of one kind.

Many people have complimented us on our good selection.

We believe our selection this year is at least as good as ever and there are many new gifts to choose from.
