UNCLE SAM SEES NEED OF CANADA

Washington Finds Dominion Hopes
Based on Monroe Doctrine

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

WASHINGTON, June 9: (CP)—Citizens of "good neighbor" Canada used to feel pretty safe because they seemed isolated from potential enemy countries. Now they are becoming invasion-conscious as war alarms reverberate around the world.

With Mother Britain arming to the teeth in the face of European tension, members of the Canadian Parliament are urging a strengthening of home defences. Reports hint of "mysterious" movements of heavy guns from one coast to another.

Canada's remoteness from expansion-hungry powers and her cordial relations with next-door United States have made a large peacetime military establishment seem unnecessary. Moreover, Canadians have counted upon Britain's warships to hold off a possible invasion of their eastern coast.

But probably the most comforting antidote for Dominion fears has been the belief that "the strong right arm of Uncle Sam" would be lifted against an aggressor who carried the fight to the Canadians' home grounds. Defense Minister Ian Mackenzie said recently:

"Just as the British navy on the Atlantic is our greatest security in that quarter so I think it might be reasonable to assume that in a major conflagration we should have friendly fleets upon the Pacific Ocean."

Situation of Canada

Canadian hopes for U.S. aid in a pinch are based roughly on:

1. The Monroe Doctrine under which the United States views as an unfriendly act any attempt by a European or Asiatic nation to deprive an American state of territory or the right of self-government by force.

Outside of the general assurances of the Monroe Doctrine, this country is not committed to the military protection of Canada. So students of international affairs find it conceivable that the United States would remain neutral if Canada became involved in a war between Great Britain and another power.

But they find it difficult to imagine the United States remaining placid if foreign troops actually were blasting their way into Vancouver or planes were dropping body-mangling bombs on Toronto and Montreal. Among many U.S. citizens, the bombing of those nearby cities would stir almost the same resentment as air raids on Buffalo and Detroit.

2. The "realistic" viewpoint that the United States, with its long unfortified northern border, could not afford to allow the conquest of Canada with the probable setting up of a strong military establishment.

Resistance against a surprise attack on this country by way of the Dominion has long been an important part of secret U. S. defense plans.

The biggest peacetime manoeuvres of the army have been sham battles between "invading" and "defending" forces in northern New York State, even including the use of large numbers of New York City taxicabs to transport troops from New Jersey and southern New York to the "front."

Canada's "First Line"

Canada's own first line of defense is a volunteer militia of about 53,000, a dozen or so batteries of coast artillery, some 85 batteries of light and medium artillery, a half-dozen destroyers and about 100 modern aircraft. Compared with the military establishment of even tiny Yugoslavia, Canada is "unarmed."

Her resistance, no matter how gallant, to an attack in force by a great power or coalition of powers would be ineffective unless the services of a strong British fleet were available. In such a situation Canada would hope for U.S. assistance by sea, air and land.

Some American alarmists have envisaged enemy aircraft making the short jump across the Bering Straits from northern Asia to Alaska, flying from Fairbanks to Winnipeg in nine hours and in another four hours or less being in a position to bomb Omaha or Chicago.

Military planes can fly that far (more than 2,000 miles) but the defense experts are not alarmed at the prospect of such an attack in the near future—because no bombers have been developed which have a tactical range of even 1,000 miles.

Meanwhile, the goal of the U.S. army is a force strong enough in numbers and equipment to smash the first contingent of an enemy which obtained a foothold anywhere in the United States, Canada or Mexico. The army air corps already has reached a stage of development where it is rated a match for the sky fighters of any nation.

WORD TO YOUNG

WINDSOR, Ont., June 9: (CP)—Resident here 68 years, Mrs. Robert Paddon, 88, says young people don't fully appreciate the many privileges they enjoy in this "wonderful age."
