That opinion is that the coming Conservative convention belongs within the category of gatherings from which miracles are most likely to

The delegates are going to Ottawa largely free of commitments. They may know the candidate for whom they intend to vote if none more attractive appears. But their minds will be open to the appeal of some last-minute entrant if they believe that they detect in his person the essential qualities of the Moses whom the Conservative Party needs to lead it out of the wilderness of opposition back into the Promised Land of power.

A strong belief at the moment is that the coming three weeks will see the search for a Conservative Moses intensified, for the reason that, unless one is found, Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion is likely to be the choice of the gathering.

SOME MISGIVINGS

Solidly based as Dr. Manion's strength is upon his infectious popularity and highly attractive and able personality, enthusiasm for him is not entirely free of misgivings. Furthermore, party success under Dr. Manion would depend upon support and alliances which responsible Conservative circles are inclined to view with increasing caution.

Who, then, is the youthful Moses who may come forward at the convention to confound the current prophecies of a Manion leadership? So far as the field can be! conjectured at the present moment, it will have to be one of four individuals, namely, J. Earl Lawson K.C., of Toronto; Major M. A. MacPherson, also a K.C., of Regina; Denton Massey of Toronto, and Col. George A. Drew, another K.C., also of Toronto. Only as a compromise would the aging and failing present leader be chosen again.
