Old Coins Are Found In Desk

Valuable Cache Taken Including Spanish Doubloons, Pieces of Eight and Other Old Money

HAMILTON, Sept. 13: (CP)—Interest has quickened in old desks and cabinets in Bermuda following the discovery of 151 gold coins valued at approximately $15,000 by a cabinet-maker of Flatts, Bermuda.

Russell L. Pearman, the fortunate resident of this British Colony, recalled the effort he had made to sell an old desk to an Englishman for $30.00. Glad he had been unsuccessful as a salesman, the islander said he had accidentally stumbled upon a secret compartment in the desk.

The coins he found were taken to Friday.

the Bank of Bermuda and an estimate made of their value. The coins included Spanish doubloons, pieces of eight, and German and Austrian pieces.

The desk had J. Richardson, an old Bermuda family name, carved on it, and the cabinet-maker believed one of the early members of the family must have been a collector of old coins. Written in Latin, in one of the drawers of the piece of furniture, was the inscription: The hidden will be revealed.

Contest Between Opposing Trades Unions Probable

C. I. O. and A. F. of L. Organizations May Seek Control of Boston's Waterfront Workers

BOSTON, Sept. 13: (CP)—A fresh contest between American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization forces along the Boston waterfront is threatened within the next few weeks.

President William Green of the A. F. of L. announced that the Federation had established a new Maritime department, thereby indicating that once again hostilities between the two rival unions for control of waterfront labor similar to the struggle of two years ago, is probable.

While Thomas McGowan, head of the C. I. O.'s seamen's union in Boston, made light of Green's announcement as "a holler to let us know he's still around," Frank Fenton, A. F. of L. representative in New England, militantly declared that the Federation would neither compromise nor co-operate with the C. I. O.

Fenton said that the Federation would set up maritime councils in key coast cities, similar to the building trades councils in which members of the construction unions combine to work out their problems.

In these maritime councils, Fenton explains, all waterfront unions, including seamen, fishermen, longshoremen, masters, mates and pilots, firemen, oilers and teamsters working on the docks would be represented. He predicted the new setup would be in operation within a month.

The prospects of a union struggle here seem to hinge on the attitude of the longshoremen. With the C. I. O. claiming 56,000 seamen members on the Atlantic Coast alone, and the masters, mates and pilots organizations remaining loyal to the American Federation of Labor, the balance of power lies with the stevedores who, while they have remained affiliated with the Federation on this coast, have shown no active objection to working ships manned by C. I. O. crews.

Such tacit co-operation to the dual-union situation on the waterfront must cease as soon as the new maritime department of the Federation begins to function Fenton declared.

Gardening

The gardens this year have been very bright with late summer bloom, so bright that many people have suggested they are better than last year. At any rate they have been very beautiful and much admired by visitors.

It seems to me a matter of regret that some of our best gardens have not been entered in the garden competition. Among those which would have made a good showing if they had been entered were William Millar's, Jack Johns', Theo Colhart's, Tom Priest's, Dave Borland's and Billy Reid's. Some of these were not just in the right condition at the time of the show but they are all very fine gardens.

The perennial phlox are making a good showing this year. This is undoubtedly one of Prince Rupert's flowers but it has not been widely grown. There seem to have been just two or three plants at the beginning and the others were taken from them. There are, however, dozens of named varieties with a wide range of colors.

Next year the Horticultural Society might well consider whether it would admit vegetables to the annual show, if it is to be held as late as it was this year. By charging a small entry fee it could be made almost self-supporting.

I have had practically no success with my water lillies. There has not been a single bloom but I shall try to winter the plants and look for better luck next year. The plants have grown pretty well and the water poppies bloomed a little but other than that there has been nothing.

Most people have seen the Baby Royal dahlias in William Millar's garden. They have grown so well that they have practically monopolized the beds where they were planted but it has been worth the sacrifice of the other flowers. They have made a grand showing.

Gladioli seem to be late this year in some gardens and so are dahlias. It has been suggested that in late lying gardens only early varieties should be used.

Many gardeners are now confining their plantings of all plants and flowers to named varieties. Jack Fuller refuses to accept anything but named plants and so do a few others. The practice seems like a good one but I find it very difficult to get the name of so many of my rock plants. Even people who are supposed to be judges of flowers seem to be wholly lost when it comes to rock plants.

Hazelton recently had a very successful flower show, staged in their own Horticultural Hall. Sweet peas are said to have been well represented and gladioli surprisingly beautiful in spite of much dry weather. William Horwill of Dorreen judged the flowers. The display was made up of roses, carnations, dahlias, asters, snapdragons, stocks, sweet peas, glads, bowls of pansies and collection of wild flowers—H. F. P.

War Outlawed Ten Years Ago

An anniversary slipped by the other day without much attention, says the Victoria Times. It marked completion of 10 years since the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war was signed by representatives of 15 nations in the gilded room of the French Foreign Office in Paris. It was hailed on the day of its signing as a great forward step in the preservation of peaceful relations between the nations and therefore will prove to be an historic document.

At that time, 10 years after the close of the World War, 3,000,000 men were under arms. Today, 10 years later, more than 3,000,000 men are under arms and there is fighting in Spain and China.

Since the Kellogg pact outlawed war, there have been no declared wars, but at least 3,000,000 men have been killed in conflicts, such as: Two incidents between China and Japan, the Spanish civil war, Italy's conquest of Ethiopia and the Grand Chaco affair between Paraguay and Bolivia.
