DEW TO PRINCE OF CHURCH

Was Career of Cardinal
Head of Roman Catholic
Church's Richest Diocese

JOSEPH New York, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Patrick Joseph, Cardinal Hayes, who rose from the slums of New York to be a cardinal in the Roman Catholic church and head of the richest diocese in the world, died in his early Sunday at his summer home near here. He was seventy-two years of age, having been born in humble parentage November 20, 1865, in City Hall Place in Five District on the lower East side of New York. There the first ten years of his life, while attending parochial school, were spent from those of the average poor boy of the neighborhood. He was born among the very poor people in the lower part of New York, the Cardinal once said. "My thought and love have always been with these unfortunate people. I made up my mind years ago that if I could do anything for them a new start, I would merely do what God intended of us to do."

At the age of fifteen, he entered the Holy Institute from which he graduated in 1886 and finished his studies in Manhattan College in 1888. His theological studies continued at St. Joseph's Seminary, Troy, N. Y. With his ordination in 1892 he began the ecclesiastical career which was to lead to the Cardinalate in the next term of thirty-two years.

The Cardinal's first step upward was when he was made secretary to his predecessor, Cardinal Farley, auxiliary bishop of New York. Later he was made chancellor of the diocese and, when Cardinal Farley became Archbishop of New York, Father Hayes was made auxiliary bishop which position he held until he succeeded to the bishopric on the death of Cardinal Farley.

Although the work of directing the archdiocese was arduous, Cardinal Hayes still found time for many notable civic, patriotic and charitable works, which made him one of the outstanding prelates of his time. He was one of the best loved men on current events and noted for his frequent utterances on timely subjects.

One of them—his criticisms of the water which he said, was missing the stage "to glorify obscenity, filth and to exploit the degradation of the unfortunate."

He started a movement for cleaner streets. He was also distinguished by his denunciations from the habit of divorce and the birth control movement, both of which he characterized as "pagan."

Interested in Ireland
He was a critic of the woman's movement for equal rights with men which he said was the "lowering, instead of the leveling, of women." He was interested in the internal affairs of Ireland. While he frequently expressed favor for the movement for freedom of the country, he was more concerned about peace for the Irish people.

The Cardinal's views on temperance were widely quoted. "The Catholic Church stands always for temperance," he said. "There are the virtues of justice, fortitude and prudence and temperance fit in with these three. If an individual can't be temperate but abuses liquor he is bound by conscience to abstain entirely. You have to avoid extremes."

Asked to construe this in regard to prohibition, Cardinal Hayes refused a point blank comment on the Volstead Act but said: "When the Master Himself used wine at the Last Supper, it is very difficult to avoid the evident conclusion"

Friendship Of States-France

Jayette Monument at Mouth of River Garonne in France is Dedicated

BORDEAUX, France, Sept. 6.—Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France and Ambassador William C. Bullitt of the United States took part Sunday in the dedication at the mouth of the Garonne River of the Lafayette monument. The ever-increasing friendship of the two nations was stressed.

TRIED TO KILL KING

Youthful Ruler of Egypt Target of Would-Be Assassin's Bullet

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 6.—The eighteen-year old King Farouk of Egypt was the supposed target of an assassin's bullet Sunday. However, the missile went wide of its mark. It was during a swimming meet that the would-be assassin, a twenty-year old student, fired at the youthful monarch. He was promptly taken into custody by nearby guards but denied any intention of killing the King.

Sunspots May Affect Radio

Greatest Eruption in Years is Predicted by Astronomical Scientists

SANTA CLARA, Cal., Sept. 6.—Astronomers of Santa Clara University predict the greatest eruption of sun spots in many years. Magnetic disturbances resulting therefrom may affect short wave radio reception but the California scientists do not agree with the forecast of French scientists that the sun spots will be accompanied by serious earthquakes on the earth.

WAS DOWN NEAR HERE

Pilot Joe Crosson Held in Grenville Channel While on Mercy Flight

Pilot Joe Crosson, noted Alaska commercial flier, carrying J. M. Perry, 77-year-old Yakima financier, who had been stricken with acute appendicitis while on a visit to mining properties in the Fairbanks district, to Seattle for treatment at the hands of specialists, was forced down in Grenville Channel, south of Prince Rupert, Sunday afternoon owing to "pea soup" weather conditions and lack of visibility and was forced to stay down for several hours before continuing his flight to Alert Bay and thence to Seattle where he arrived late yesterday. The plane had left Ketchikan at 1 p.m. While down the plane received weather reports from Prince Rupert.

FRIGHTFUL AIR CRASH

Ten Persons Killed When Royal Air Force Ship Hits House and Explodes

LONDON, Sept. 6. (CP)—Three persons were killed and nineteen seriously injured as a result of a frightful crash of a Royal Air Force plane in Edmonton, a suburb of London, Sunday. The plane crashed into the roof of a house and burst into flames, exploding as the seething mass hurtling into the street, splattered pedestrians with burning gasoline. The dead included the pilot, a woman who was in bed in a room of the house which the plane struck. The other killed and injured were people in the street.

SAND POINT, Idaho, Sept. 6. (CP)—A serious forest fire is raging out of control over one thousand acres of land near here. Four hundred fire fighters are making little impression in combatting it. There are also serious forest fires in other parts of northern Idaho and Washington.

NO ANSWER BY HITLER IN CRISIS

Chancellor Adolf Hitler Fails To Give His Decision in Regard To Czechoslovakia

Says Germany Is Not Ready

Has No Economic Worries But is Not in Position to Fight

LOOKS LIKE PEACE

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Reuters News Agency reported today that the Czech government, in an ultimate offer to settle the minority dispute promised Sudeten Germans recognition of territorial autonomy of the Sudeten German region, recognition of full equality of Czechoslovakia state and recognition of the equality of the German language in the Sudeten area. Reuters said acceptance by the Sudetens was practically certain.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—This was expected to be a momentous day in European affairs for it was thought that Chancellor Adolf Hitler would announce his future policy in regard to the German Sudeten question in Czechoslovakia. However, Der Fuehrer completely ignored Czechoslovakia in his proclamation to the Nazi Congress, thereby disappointing observers who had hoped for an inkling of German intentions in Central Europe.

There is no indication yet as to what course Hitler may take—continue further peaceful negotiations with the Czech government for a settlement or march into the country on the pretext of aiding the Sudetens.

Hitler is expected to make a number of important speeches during the course of an eight-day Nazi party congress at Nuremberg for which 800,000 Nazis from all parts of Germany are assembled.

Speaking to the Nazi Congress today, Chancellor Hitler assured his followers that Germany was so healthy economically that it "will be without worries for a good few years to come." Hitler gave warning that Germany could no longer be brought to heel by economic blockade such as that which reduced the nation to virtual starvation in the closing months of the Great War. He hinted that Germany was not yet economically ready for war and would not be so until production was raised to higher levels.

FINAL BULLETINS

PULP MILL STILL ALIVE
"We, like you, are very anxious to get this pulp mill project under way and really believe we can conclude it this fall or not later than next spring," says Edward A. Thompson, prominent San Francisco financier, in a letter to City Commissioner W. J. Alder. During a recent visit here, Mr. Thompson stated, that his syndicate had already put $100,000 into the undertaking and had no intention of dropping it. Mr. Thompson's letter suggests an early visit here by F. L. Buckley.

DROWNING FATALITIES
