Quebec Delegates Indicate They Cannot Follow Keynote Suggestions of Meighen

Reaction Or Reform?

Bennett Is Banquet Speaker—Political Lightening Centres On Ottawa This Week

OTTAWA, July 6: (CP)—Many Quebec delegates to the Conservative national convention here indicated last night that they would not support some Imperialistic proposals put forward yesterday by Senator Arthur Meighen in the keynote speech.

The rank and file of the Conservative party had been asked to send to the national convention suggestions for the party platform to be decided at the gathering here.

The question that was disturbing Conservative men and women was whether the historic party which since Confederation has been regarded as a rightist party should veer to the left.

"Raffs of suggestions are coming in," said J. R. MacNicol, Toronto member of parliament and energetic joint chairman of the committee just before the convention.

The jovial face of Mr. MacNicol lit up as the pile of suggestions grew. "We have adopted a highly democratic procedure to get the views of the rank and file," he said.

Many political observers consider the decisions of the convention in regard to party policy will be quite as important to the Conservative chances of carrying the country as will the selection of a leader.

Direction an Issue

Critics of the Mackenzie King government have claimed it is occupying most of the road on which the Conservative party is accustomed to travel and there isn't enough room on the right side for an out-and-out Tory party to get ahead.

It was a foregone conclusion there would be wide differences of opinion among the convention delegates on the question of veering to the left or the right.
