Bobby Meinhart Hopes To Be First Weight Lifter To Represent Canada

Six feet, two inches tall and weighing 180 pounds, young Robert started tossing weights only two land a half years ago. Thumbing through a psysical culture book he saw a picture of Eugene Sandow. often claimed the strongest man in the world and Bobby decided he would be strong too. He took to the weights as muscle builders and today believes he'll be the first iron-juggler to represent Canada in the Olympics.

Bobby's coach, Ed. Birley, holds high hopes for the youngster. "If he sticks to his work and does that he will make the Olympic team," Birley said. "With the record at 340 pounds and Meinhart having no difficulty in lifting 235 bounds now it seems to me he will. by the time the 1940 Olympiad rolls around, be able to set a pretty stiff pace for other competitors."

In lifting 31,350 pounds before authorized witnesses, Meinhart ised various barbell weights up to 250 pounds.
