So Crisp THE SAACELLE

Adapted from the METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER Picture by GERTRUDE GELBIN

SYNOPSIS: Jim Lane, ace test-pilot, loses his job at the Drake Aviation Company when he interrupts a Transcontinental flight to marry Ann Barton. They celebrate their marriage with Gunner, Jim's mechanic and best friend. Drake has Jim black-listed at all aviation companies. Jim decides to fly a freak plane in a Trophy Race in order to win $10,000. NOW READ CHAPTER FOUR - BELOW

"Give me a Scotch." "You'll take a coke."

Jim (Clark Gable), Ann (Myrna Loy) and Gunner (Spencer Tracy) ride to the flying field for the Thompson Trophy Race. Gunner still pleads with Ann to dissuade Jim from taking up Grant's freak plane; but Ann, who has never before witnessed a race and who knows none of the hazards of flying, feels safe in Jim's confidence in himself. At the field, they learn that Benson (Louis Jean Haydt) is flying the Drake plane. Copyright 1938, Losw's Inc.

Jim and Benson are old friends and greet each other warmly. They jibe each other as to which one will win, each assuring the other he hasn't a chance. Benson tells Jim he's going to win because he's promised to take his wife and three children to Europe on the $10,000 prize. Jim laughs back that he's going to win because he and Ann are going to fly to the moon on the prize-money.

"He's on fire! Jim! Jim!"

Ann and Gunner watch the race, with Jim taking the lead, Benson second. The crowd is cheering Jim. Ann chides Gunner joyously for his fears. A sudden cry of "Lane's plane is on fire!" brings her to her feet. She turns upon Gunner hysterically, but Gunner, needing every bit of courage to control himself, throws her off savagely. For the first time Ann realizes what it means to be a test-pilot.

"I don't know what fear is, baby."

Silent and tense, she and Gunner watch Jim take the last lap. By some miracle Jim has managed to put out the fire. He finishes the race in record time and lands amid the shouts and cheers of the crowd. Ann and Gunner rush over to him. A sharp cry rises from the stands. Ann looks up to see the plane Benson is piloting take a sudden nosedive, and grash to the ground. Read the next thrilling
