RECIPROCITY BOUND TO BE AGAIN THE SHIBBOLETH SOON.

Those who in this constituency fought so valiantly at the last Federal election for reciprocity but were defeated at the polls have every reason to take heart and keep the armor of their invincible arguments bright and handy. From present newspaper indications it is soon again to be the question of the hour, and when it does it will be backed by such a preponderance of public sentiment that it will sweep the whole country and carry with it the Conservative party, still whining its fears of annexation and waving the British flag, into the "demmd, damp waters" of opposition, as Mantilini would say.

The people of Canada, now that there is no political battle raging and they have time for reflexion, can see what has been lost; see through the political bogies used to scare them away from a proper consideration of their own and Canada's best interests; sighingly admit they were used as the monkey used the cat wholly to serve the selfish ambitions of politicians hungry for office; scornfully recognizing the inconsistencies, the mean and petty shams and subterfuges used by the Conservative party to effect that object. One of the best instances of all this and more is to be found in a recent issue of the Toronto Globe, under the heading "Wheat, Politicians and Patriotism." It shows the duplicity and unscrupulousness of the party leaders, and brings home to us "the saddest words of tongue or pen."

The announcement was made yesterday, says the Globe, that the Canadian Pacific Railway had so readjusted its transportation charges on its Soo line as to carry wheat and oats from Saskatchewan to Minneapolis and Duluth at the same rates as to Fort William and Port Arthur. The new rates are now in force. This change, it is said, will aid in saving 25,000,000 bushels of grain now unmarketed and suffering loss in Western Canada.

What a humiliation this must be to those "no trade or truck with the Yankees" politicians who four months ago traveled from Lake Huron to the Atlantic warning loyal Canadians against allowing western grain to be shipped to Minneapolis. At that time the grinding of Canadian wheat in American mills meant annexation. Or if annexation might be shunned, then at the very least the millers of Canada would be ruined by this American competition.

And this wild talk was not the campaign chatter of fifth rate Tory politicians alone. The leader in it, its one effective exponent, was Hon. Clifford Sifton. At Cobourg, even more concretely at St. Mary's, and on his platforms everywhere the former Minister of the Interior made this Minneapolis grain bugaboo the burden of his speeches. He denounced

"the proposal under which the hard wheat of the west will be distributed in the United States through Minneapolis and St. Paul, whose millers will grind it, drive our millers out of the export trade, and confine them merely to the domestic trade."

Mr. Sifton knew then, but he did not tell his hearers, that the millers of Minneapolis and St. Paul are free to import unlimited quantities of Canadian wheat and grind it in bond for export trade, and receive in rebates from their Government 99 per cent. of what they paid in duty. American millers are free to use Canadian hard wheat in competition with Canadian millers in the export trade, but the high American duty which the trade agreement would have wiped out prevents Canadian farmers from competing with American farmers in the domestic flour trade of the United States. Mr. Sifton concealed those facts from the electors. Now the people in the west and in the east are finding them out for themselves, and are finding out also how these interested campaigners humbugged those who trusted them. Mr. Sifton said more: he predicted, to the damage of the prosperity of Canada, "that one hundred millions of bushels of wheat will be diverted from Canadian railways and go south from Manitoba and Saskatchewan through the United States." What have we now? One of the Canadian railways that fought the Liberal Government as vehemently as Mr. Sifton himself lowers its rates on its American line in order to carry within the next three months 25,000,000 bushels of grain from Western Canada to Minneapolis. On the Board of Directors of that railway is Sir William Van Horne, who, in terms not used in polite society, announced his antagonism to the larger markets policy, and also Sir Edmund Osler, who in September last warned West Toronto electors that such a trade arrangement would make annexation inevitable in a generation. These are the very men to now lower the rates on their American railway for purposes that four months ago language could not adequately condemn.

JOHNSON AND JIM CORBETT

"Big Smoke" Makes Belittling Accusations Against Former Champion—Says He Offered Him $100,000 to "Lay Down."

Chicago, Jan. 31—"Jim Corbett and a Chicago theatrical man offered me $100,000 to lay down to Al Kaufman after I had defeated Jim Jeffries. When I returned from Australia Jim Corbett and the same theatrical magnate visited me and offered me a substantial prize if I would consent to fake ten rounds with Corbett and assist in rebuilding Gentleman Jim's reputation."

These were the answers Jack Johnson made to the signed statements of Jim Corbett to the effect that Johnson was the luckiest of champions, that he was dodging fights with the best of the present day heavyweights, and he was a man of doubtful courage, and that he was hogging it by demanding $30,000 for his end of a purse for a world's championship fight.

If that story from Manitoba had told us that a goose had found a gold mine, people would have called it a hoax. But as it was a turkey the story gets more credence.

The Bank of Commerce has by resolution increased its capital from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000. Would that it were as easy for the rest of us to turn the trick.
