Mrs. S. P. Woodside and family, sunshine of the past few days and who have been spending the past they showed it quite clearly. For Miss N. Bird, superintendent of couple of months in Victoria, will weeks the plants had been trainthe Ridley Home here, returned to be returning to the city from the ed to adapt themselves to a life without sunshine and the rain at least every other day. They had become accustomed to that kind of life. Then suddenly the clouds clear away and the sun shines down with almost tropical brightness and the plants immediately show signs of distress. They wilt or look uncomfortable. It is too great change to come on them suddenly.

The English irises are out and for the past week or so they have been making a nice display. They come in all shades of blue from the glorious royal purple down to the pure white. They differ from the German irises in that they come from bulbs instead of from the ungainly corms which have to be kept exposed. Theo Collart has a very fine clump of these flowers in a number of different colors.

Why work in a garden? I never do it. I take recreation in the garden by trying to give some attention to my floral friends. When visitors remark, as they usually do.
