DESPICABLE PESTS

Editor, Daily News:

In your weekly "Garden Notes" you seldom touch on the subject of garden pests. Several years ago when we were just starting out to make a rock garden and had collected a few plants a certain two-legged pest came along and cleaned us out of all that was then worth while. Now, after being rid of such vermin for these several years in which we have not lost a single plant due to the fact of the co-operation you gave us in denouncing the raiders in your paper, another of these pests has turned up and on Monday morning a nice little clump of blue aubretia I had planted on the face of rock beside my neighbor's gate disappeared and also there was some disturbance around the roots of a clump of border carnations close by. Now again yesterday morning this detestable pest paid me another visit and dug from the same spot a nice clump of pinks I was nursing along and was waiting to see its effect against a clump of yellow alyssum.

Now, Mr. Editor, don't you think it is rather disheartening trying to beautify our drab landscape when a vandal such as this is at large? Several people have started out this year to make rock gardens and beautify their lots right down to street level where they can't see their plants. When I started out several folks said in passing that I was doing a bold thing in trying to grow plants so near to the street but I replied I didn't think the Prince Rupert people would harm them and that they would come to enjoy them as much as I did. My confidence in the people hasn't been misplaced as this is only the second instance of theft of plants from us in five years which shows that we don't have many specimens of this sort around who use the early morning for their dirty work.

I hope this letter will warn others who have gardens to be on the lookout for this crawly thing and please phone me up if you catch it and I will gladly come and help you put salt on its tail.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for taking up so much of your space but, being an enthusiast yourself, I believe you will second the motion.

WALTER LONGWILL.

Ninety-seven passengers here yesterday afternoon aboard the steamer Princess Louise southbound from Alaska to Vancouver included a number of school teachers from various southeastern Alaska points going south for the summer vacation now that schools of the territory are closed. Eight persons disembarked from the Princess Louise here and seven took passage at this port for the south.

BIG NAMES IN COMEDY

"Midnight," now Showing at Capitol Theatre Here, Has Distinguished Cast

Claudette Colbert, as an American fortune hunter stalking her prey in international society; Don Ameche, as a taxi driver who unexpectedly changes his grandiose plans, and Francis Lederer, as a handsome and gold-dripping Paris playboy, are the romantic leads in "Midnight," a gay, new comedy being shown tonight and Friday at the Capitol Theatre here.

The story is that of a third-rate dancer with first-rate ambitions who falls in love with the taxi driver and then leaves him to stalk for bigger game in high society. Romantic intrigue in a number of directions follows and the climax comes with a satisfactory ending.

The cast also includes Mary Astor, John Barrymore, Elaine Barrie, Hedda Hopper and Rex O'Malley. The players show their versatility by ably dividing their time between comedy, character and drama roles and the picture is said to be high in entertainment value.

Richard St. Clair is sailing tonight on the Prince George for Vancouver.

Mrs. Gillis Couture is sailing tonight on the Prince George for a trip to Vancouver.

Rev. Father Anthony Meulenberg, Roman Catholic priest at Stewart, who has been in Vancouver for the King's visit, is expected to be a passenger aboard the Catala Sunday evening returning north.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Donoho of Tow Hill, near Massett, arrived in the city on the Prince John last evening from the Islands and will leave on tomorrow evening's train for Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minnesota.
