THE GRAIN OF SALT

We suggest that all our readers take the news that is published with the proverbial grain of salt. It may be true or it may not. Announcements are being made that we know well must be untrue. Yesterday Germany declared her forces had entered Warsaw and Poland declared they had not. One was wrong. In many other respects there are contrary reports published. The best thing to do today is to doubt until confirmation has been received.

Just at the commencement of the war such as this there is hope of influencing neutral nations by claiming victories. There is also the idea of keeping home people happy, especially in the case of Germany where unrest has already been reported.

Just now the newspaper reporters are keen to make records in sending in first news of happenings of movements. That means that occasionally a man may take chances on being right. However, most of the errors occur because of definite misleading statements by government propagandists of officials who wish to definitely mislead.

On the whole the most of the news that is published in this country is correct or approximately so. The Canadian Press, which is the chief Canadian news gathering agency, is very careful.

VERY FEW LOSSES

There have been very few losses so far of British ships since the war commenced. The moment war was declared instructions were sent to all British ships telling them where to go and how to act. German submarines have been kept from showing much activity. Considering the number of British ships engaged in trade, the losses have been so small as to be negligible from a national standpoint. Food is moving steadily into Great Britain and will continue to do so.

On the other side of the picture so many German vessels have had to take refuge in neutral ports that German overseas trade has been entirely stopped and, in spite of a supply coming from Russia and possibly Italy, the effects of the stoppage will be felt very soon. Britain has command of the high seas. Turkey has the Dardanelles, Egypt, France and Britain have the Suez Canal. We cannot expect much more just yet. The situation is not wholly unplesant from a military and naval point of view.

DEPENDS UPON THE PEOPLE

Just now Prime Minister Mackenzie King defines the policy of the federal government and doubtless he has good reasons for any action he may take. If this policy is not pleasing to the people he can quite easily be forced to change it. We are not suggesting that he is not doing the right thing. He has more knowledge of the situation than have any of the rest of us.

PR. GEORGE GIRL DAZES OLD LONDON

Metropolis Marvels At Inga Anderson's Stage-Acting and Floor Show—All In Night's Work

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 9: (CP)—Until war started there was a brand-new female menace in the grease-paint and neon square mile they call Theatreland that lies somewhere around Piccadilly Circus.

This time the threat to peace and quiet was strictly professional. It seems that a Nordic-looking young woman from Prince George B. C., named Inga Anderson, does far more clever things than is healthy for the rest of the profession.

She sings, dances, acts, plays the violin if necessary—and does them all well. Radio, films, cabaret, stage, television; they all come alike to this 25-year old dynamo from British Columbia.

So that the critics say Miss Anderson isn't a star, she's a whole constellation.

And the back-stage prophets tell us that, if Equity doesn't ban the girl for being a one-woman agency, the boys and girls in Denmark Street and Shaftesbury Avenue will have to see Canada House or the Home Office or someone about a deportation order before the jobless figure increases.

Cafe Favorite
Nightly, and in considerable uproar, La Anderson sings songs that are topical, witty and a bit naughty in places like the elegant Cafe de Paris on Coventry Street.

She has glossy blond hair, big eyes and just that right mixture of syrup and vitriol in her voice to please the most sophisticated supper crowd in the world.

Tall and willowy, she slinks across the stage, singing in a voice that can be heard at the back but still seems designed personally for each corona-corona customer.

When laughter punctuates her lines she bites her lip and tries to look sort of shocked herself. They eat it up.

The accent makes it hard for them to tell just where she comes from "over there" so Inga lets out between wisecracks that she's Canadian.

She helps to write the lyrics of most of her numbers. "Spare-time" work this.

They have titles of sugar-coated malice like "That's How I Feel About Love," "Flowers at the Bottom of My Garden" and "Put It Down to Glands."

Earlier in the evening she can be seen at the Lyric Theatre playing the part of the physical training instructor in "The Women" Claire Booth's witty all-female castigation of womanhood, which is having a big success here.

Off duty she is a cool, attractive young person who lives in a modern little apartment high above Mayfair's Cork Street.

Miss Anderson made good coffee for the writer and told her story in a voice that reminded us of Garbo, also from the North.

Her voice—the main source of her income nowadays—reveals something of the grit it took to get to the top of a road littered with the worn-out dancing shoes of those who didn't.

Inga was born in Buenos Aires of Danish parents who later migrated to British Columbia. Dad is still in the lumber business in Prince George.

Copywriters for correspondence school ads ought to erect a grateful memorial to her.

She's the original Girl Who Became a Star in 15 Easy Lessons.

Tried Hollywood
A natural talent for dancing induced an intelligent father to send away for a cheap postal course in the art just to "keep the kid quiet."

Encouragement and advice from mother and a lot of practice found Inga at 14 able to give dancing lessons to the neighborhood children.

Then, with a few dollars, the dancing shoes and the courage that's brought her to the top, she trekked to Hollywood.

It was the promised development of the Easy Lessons.

There were some small parts in Hollywood. She studied dancing with Albertina Rasch until one day Mme. Rasch, who liked the long-legged kid from B. C., gave her a job.

WINS HIS OWN GAME

Bucky Walters Does Fine Pitching And Knocks Out Home Run As Cincinnati Reds Down Pittsburgh Pirates

PITTSBURG, Sept. 9: (CP)—Pitcher Bucky Walters pretty well won his own game for the Cincinnati Reds yesterday. He held the Pittsburgh Pirates down to five hits and made a home run himself. St. Louis Cardinals still menaced the Reds' pennant lead by downing the Chicago Cubs again.

Yesterday's Big League scores:
National League
Cincinnati 5, Pittsburgh 2
St. Louis 10, Chicago 3
Philadelphia 2-1, Brooklyn 11-3
American League
Cleveland 12, St. Louis 1
Boston 1, New York 4
Washington 4, Philadelphia 5.

RATES ARE INCREASED

To Cost Much More Henceforth To Receive Treatment At Prince Rupert General Hospital

On recommendation of the finance committee, the hospital board, having found that costs have mounted since the building of the new hospital, last night adopted an increased schedule of rates.

Public ward rates are increased from $2.50 to $3 per day, semi-private rates from $3.50 to $4.50 and private from $5 to $7 per day. Henceforth there will be a case room charge of $5 and newborn babies will be charged for at the rate of 50c per day.

The new rates are effective forthwith. It was left with the finance committee to deal with the matter of existing contracts with such organizations as the Canadian National Railways Employees' Association, Indian Department, marine department and Workmen's Compensation Board.

Henry Scott Of Terrace Dead

Henry Scott of Terrace passed away this morning at the Prince Rupert General Hospital at the age of seventy-four years. He had been a patient in hospital since July. Born in England, he had resided at Terrace for many years and was well known. A son, Fred Scott, survives.

A fifty cent classified ad. will often make you many dollars.

After more work in pictures came an offer to tour the United States with an Albertina Rasch troupe.

When the tour ended in New Orleans, there was a fresh offer to play in "Girl of the Golden West" in New York. Plenty of fodder for a burning ambition.

On Three Continents

She joined the Ziegfeld Follies, went on tour with Fred Stone in "Smiling Faces," then returned to Broadway in "Ballyhoo."

This show hadn't been going long when a cabled offer to come to London arrived. Albertina Rasch wanted her again as chief assistant and solo dancer in "Wild Violets"—a phenomenally successful show.

When that ended she stayed in London to play a stellar role in "Jack and Jill."

A short holiday in Denmark followed and then she dashed off to South Africa with "Wild Violets," producing the ensemble scenes, doubling the comedienne's part and, though she didn't know it, preparing for a breakdown.

She returned to London for shows at the Palladium and provincial houses.

Then she gave out. For months she was desperately ill. The solidly-established reputation seemed threatened. Doctors ordered a long rest.

Recently the dynamo was back with a stepped-up voltage, giving Londoners a very fine vocal antidote to "crisis nerves."

Since she was chosen to sing before the Duke and Duchess of Kent the other night, Inga Anderson is thinking seriously of concentrating on the "sophisticated" stuff.

Shaftesbury Avenue will be glad to hear it.
