Gardening

In spite of the fact that nights have been cold following a chilly breeze each day, the plants in the gardens have been pushing their heads through the soil, awaiting milder weather to start real growth. Crocuses and winter aconites are noticed in Roy Winslow's garden and daffodils and tulips are pushing ahead almost everywhere. I noticed crocuses in Jack Fuller's garden and in Lance Stiles' place. Nearly everybody, I hear, has crocuses either in bloom or very near it. Snowdrops have been out for several weeks. I noticed some in Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McIntoshes garden and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Black also hove a nice showing.

I am told that tickets are going well for the annual dinner of the Horticultural Society on Thursday. The big attraction is to be the showing of colored pictures of gardens in the south. Fred Coles is well known in Puget Sound cities as a garden expert and his visit should prove very helpful.

It has been suggested that this year an admission fee of ten cents should be charged for each entry to the annual flower show. Such a fee was charged exhibitors in the old fall fair days and it did not seem to prevent people entering. This fee would bring in enough money to enable the society to pay its way, it is claimed.

Those who have weeds in their gardens should take the first opportunity of pulling them out. They come out very easily after these frosts have partly heaved them out of the ground. Later the work will be much more difficult.

Some people are sowing sweet peas but most people sow them in boxes and transplant a little later to the open ground. The ground should be well dug and fertilized before sowing.

Those fortunate enough to have small greenhouses are sowing some of their annuals now so that they may have strong plants when the season arrives for planting out. Lobelia should be sown earlier than this for best results. It is a very slow growing flower.

While the past winter seems to have been easy on the perennials or biennials, some of the local people have lost their Canterbury Bells. They have fallen victims to too much moisture. —H.F.P.

Final High School Dance Of Year Is Held On Saturday

On Saturday night Booth Memorial Senior High School and Grade 9 held a St. Patrick's dance. This, being the last High School dance of the year, was well attended. About 150 students and teachers danced from eight until twelve to the music of Balagno's orchestra. Refreshments were served at 10:30. Peter Allan, speaking on behalf of the matriculation class, said goodbye to the rest of the students.

Loan Money To Purchase Boats

Newfoundland Government Moves To Help Industry

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 14: (CP)—Because it feels the fishing industry's best prospects lie in deep sea operations with large power vessels, the Newfoundland Commission of Government is loaning money to fishermen and merchants to purchase suitable vessels of that type from overseas owners.

The government's announcement of the plan said it had been decided upon as an experiment for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

Applicants must have experience in offshore fishing and be of good financial standing. The government arranges for an independent survey and valuation of the vessel to be purchased and grants the loan only after the price has been approved.

Loans are repayable in equal installments over a period not exceeding six years and bear four percent interest. The government holds a first mortgage on the ship during that time and the vessel must be insured in favor of the Department of Natural Resources.

Canada's Royal Guests—

MOBILIZE BLOOMS TO BETTER GREET THEIR MAJESTIES ON VISIT

All Resources of Rideau Hall Greenhouses Making Ready For King and Queen in Coming Tour

By MURIEL ADAMS
Canadian Press Correspondent

OTTAWA, March 14: (CP)—Pastel sweet peas and sprays of lilies-of-the-valley and perhaps an orchid or two will grace the Queen's pink and blue bedroom when she is staying at Rideau Hall during the royal visit to Canada in May. Deeper shaded flowers, probably potted azaleas and hydrangeas, will be used in the Kink's bedroom, furnished in maroon and blue.

Six greenhouses now filled with greenery and buds in various stages of growth are expected to produce thousands of blooms by May, each to have a special place of honor in Rideau Hall as part of the decorative scheme for Their Majesties' sojourn.

Nearly 50,000 carnations shading from deep red through pink to white will be massed in low, silver bowls in the centre and down the ends of the horseshoe-shaped table for the state dinner.

Because Lady Tweedsmuir is fondest of white flowers there are many varieties of pure white in the greenhouses. White lilacs, gardenias, Calla lilies, Easter lilies, bouvardia and lilies-of-the-valley will all be in bloom in May when the royal visitors arrive. Due to the usual heavy scent of pure white flowers it has been found they are unsuitable for a large banking or central decoration if the atmosphere is warm, A. E. Challis, head gardener of the Government House greenhouses, said. However, they are most effective in large jardinieres and glass bowls in the various rooms of Rideau Hall.

Gardener's Pride

A white amaryllis with a splash of gold at its mouth is the pride and joy of the cheery gardener who for more than 30 years has been "fussing with the plants" at Government House and it will be on view when the King is here. Born during Lord Bessborough's term of office, the large, white flower with heavy, dark green lily-like leaves was christened "Rowlands Castle" after Lord Bessborough's English home. A simple white carnation was Lady Bessborough's favorite flower, the gardener reports, while her predecessor, Lady Willingdon, favored pale mauve carnations.

When Mrs. George Pape arrived in Ottawa as lady-in-waiting to Lady Tweedsmuir, she brought with her about 50 varieties of orchids—butterfly, cluster orchids in deep purples, mauves, yellows and whites—and these, together with 25 of the more common varieties already established in the greehouses, make up a "orchid colony" where new varieties are being sought. It is hoped some of the unusual types will be in bloom when the King and Queen are here.

Throughout the seasons, Government House is alive with the color and scent of flowers grown and picked in the greenhouse and arranged personally by Mrs. Pape. Now the large pottery and china containers are filled with hyacinths in bright reds and blues, tulips in pinks and orange and delicate daffodils, narcissi and freesia.

To greet Their Majesties when they disembark at Quebec for a day's stay at the Citadel, large boxes of flowers grown at Rideau Hall may be flown down to insure their safe-keeping enroute to decorate the old stone fortress.
