DID NOT LIKE IT

Recently the Germans took control of the person of President Hacha of Czechoslovakia, keeping him practically a prisoner. They then induced him to address the people over the radio urging them to submit to the Germans. The young workers of Prague did not like this so they took a shot at their so-called president. They did not kill him but he will now understand that they disapproved of his policy. That seems to be the interpretation of the reported attempt to assassinate him.

THE VICTORIA OUTLAWS

Many people look upon the members of the Legislature at Victoria who went out of their way to launch an attack on the British Empire as vicious people who deserve to be punished. That was the first reaction of a great many people. Second thoughts indicate that they are rather to be pitied than punished. They are people to be sorry for. Evidently they have read so much subversive literature that they know nothing else. Some of these papers they read are pro-German, if not openly so, at least by inference. They are pro-German to the extent that they are written by people with jaundiced minds who never see anything good or worth while in anything British.

At a time when the British Empire, including Canada, is at war, anyone that sees no good in the country in which they live or in the Empire in which they are a part most certainly have diseased minds. Young members of the Legislature, who naturally are of an emotional nature, have become imbued with the hallucination that there is nothing good in that part of the world in which they live. Some of them have built up in their minds a picture of an Eldorado which the call Russia. As a result of persistent propaganda working on emotional minds they possibly feel that there is no place in the world worth while except the Soviet Republics.

Looking back we remember how fanatical were the poor deluded women who fought for the right of women to vote. They pictured to themselves a wonderful state made over by women. One or two women actually gave their lives in their efforts to bring people to see how righteous was their cause. Others wore themselves out physically and became prematurely old.

Yet in Canada today and in Great Britain, the two countries which these people seem to despise, we are ruled by women, the only exception being in that part of Canada where they enacted the Padlock Law. Yet, according to our legislative friends, things are no better in Britain or in Canada for the efforts of these emotional martyrs. So with the spectacular emotionalism shown at Victoria. It will have little effect on the world which will carry on the same as before. The British Empire is something big, so big that the petty display at Victoria serves only to strengthen it rather than otherwise. The Empire is more than a group of nations banded together for a common purpose. It is the working out of an ideal that will be an example to the rest of the world. It is a symbol of the time when all nations will be able to work in co-operation one with another in the biggest co-operative effort possible in this world. To bring this about, it will be necessary for the leaders of the nation to work together with the one object in view and not be led off the track by men and women with jaundiced minds who see nothing but evil in the people and institutions which have made it possible for them to take prominent places in the council of the nation.

SWEDEN KEEPS LAND, SEA DEFENCES PRIMED

Determined to preserve her neutrality but still preparing for any aggressive designs that may turn to action on the part of Russia or Germany, the two powers who covet control of the Baltic Sea, Sweden keeps both her land and sea defences primed and ready for action. Shown here is a 25 mm. anti-aircraft gun on the conning tower of one of the submarines on coastal patrol duty. Clips of shells can be seen in readiness in front of the gun mount.

BRITISHERS GOING OVER

Thousands Are Crossing Each Week to France—Allies Have Effective Common Plan, Says Hore-Belisha

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Rt. Hon. Leslie Hore-Belisha, secretary for war, announced in the House of Commons this morning that thousands of trained men were crossing to France each week to reinforce the original British Expeditionary Force of 158,000 men and that nearly a million men were under intensive training in England. A strong Polish army, he said, was being formed in France and Poles from all parts of the world were enlisting in it.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, who has just returned from France, said there was very great activity on the British front. The troops were busily engaged in digging and constructing defences. Activity and mud seemed to prevail everywhere.

Since the beginning of the war, the minister stated, 7,000 men from the ranks had been offered commissions. The Allied forces were working to a common plan and their strategy had been pre-determined.

Man Power Important

Hore-Belisha said that man-power is a decisive factor because, whereas Germany has to defend 200 miles of frontier, the Allies must envisage the possibility of aggression by Germany along eight hundred miles from the North Sea to the Alps.

"Every day that passes finds us stronger," the Secretary for War stated.

News of Conflict Relegates Paying "Ads" to Inside Pages

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 22. (CP)—The day by day story of the war, filtered through the fine mesh of censorship, is the dominant topic in Britain's newspapers.

Familiar names have been replaced by expressions like "Somewhere in England," "On the Western Front," "In Wessex," "Somewhere in the Midlands."

The war itself or war-related activities affect every page and every department News columns, pictures and even advertisements reflect the country's preoccupation with the struggle which the British government has declared can only end with the overthrow of Hitlerism.

War practically monopolizes the front page. Check of wartime editions of the Daily Telegraph and Morning Post showed that its entire front page, with the exception of two two-line items, was devoted to news of or connected with the war.

Conserve Paper

Newspapers have been reduced in size by two thirds to conserve newsprint, most of which is imported in peacetime from Sweden. The Times, which used to average 22 pages, now has shrunk to 16 pages. The Telegraph has dropped from 20 to 14 pages on the average and other newspapers correspondingly. London afternoon papers, always small in size, are even smaller. The Star prints a six page edition, the Evening News eight pages.

War brought the Daily Mail into line with other London dailies which print news on their front pages instead of devoting them to lucrative advertising. The Times is now the only London metropolitan daily with a "dead" front page. The Telegraph switched to front page news a few months ago. Provincial newspapers, however, are more conservative. Many continue to confine news to inside pages.

Almost all photographs portray war scenes. Of those that don't a majority are weddings hastened by the war. One issue of the News Chronicle had front page pictures of the commanders of Britain's first and second army corps in France. The same issue also had pictures of Gracie Fields broadcasting. British troop convoys in France, Madam Ormsby, wife of the head of the Turkish military mission in London, and of a German village captured by the French.

War In The Ads

The ads have a war slant too. Manufacturers of nerve tonics proclaim their wares as indispensable during the existing period of strain. Tailors assert their efficiency at making service uniforms. Publishers stress the value of books to banish blackout blues.

An old-established advertising firm ran its own advertisement in the press, announcing that it has carried on business through the Peninsular War of 1814, the Waterloo Campaign, the Crimean War, the Boer War and the First Great War.

BUSMAN'S WAR PAY

LONDON, Nov. 22. (CP)—The London Passenger Transport Board, operating London's buses, has announced they will make up to respondents. London afternoon papers, always small in size, are even smaller. The Star prints a
