PROGRESSIVES STILL BOUND TO PROGRESS.

As a peacemaker the Journal is entitled to a special prize in Class A1. In the same breath it tells us that the Conservative party of Prince Rupert is united and calls the Progressive Conservatives hard names. They are "disaffected ones," which is mild; they are "these malcontents," which is next door to being called malefactors; they are "dupes of the Liberals," and the latter party "now espouses their cause in order to use them in the coming election." A stranger, a paid emissary of McBride, is sent here to crack the whip over the shoulders of the local Conservative party, and especially those who have the honesty and courage of thinking for themselves along the lines of true Conservative principles. This whipper-in cracks his whip and undoubtedly sends a favorable report of the result to his master. He also, by virtue of his authority as whipper-in, makes a public announcement giving due notice, over the signature of J. Fred Ritchie, that the Progressive Conservative Association "has been formally disbanded."

As a denial of this the men forming the association thus suddenly disbanded by outside parties, insert in the afternoon newspaper "a repudiation of the advertised Disbandment," and they held a meeting last night still as an association and to prove they were not disbanded, not by a long shot. It is an old saying that you cannot keep new wine in old bottles.

The list of those whom the Journal in its political rancor calls "dupes" and "tools" and worse, are given here for the reason that these are men who have won popular esteem and who believe in the right of the people to have a voice in their own government; men whose democratic principles naturally lead them to abhor an autocratic two-man government. Here are their names: H. H. Clarke, W. C. Sibbald, R. W. Markham, F. M. Lannic, George Leek, J. A. Miller, Charles Taylor, W. H. Vickers, George Sutherland, William Grant, John O'Brien, A. J. Prudhomme, C. G. Thomas, A. Ward, N. Mackay.

NEW LIBERAL PAPER FOR VANCOUVER.

The Sun, the new morning Liberal newspaper, made its initial bow to the Vancouver public yesterday week. It is forty-eight pages and for a first issue is in every respect a wonder. The managing editor is John P. McConnell, the founder, editor and part owner of the Saturday Sunset, whose forceful writings in that bright weekly over the signature of Bruce are well known to Prince Rupert people. The new venture starts with a sworn statement of over fourteen thousand subscribers. The Daily News presents its most distinguished considerations to its new Liberal confrere, the Sun.

CAN M'BRIDE HOPE TO BE RETURNED?

The Victoria Times in a recent issue confirms our statement in regard to the probability of a provincial election next month, and it warns its readers that the same tactics are to be followed in this election as discredited that of 1909. The Times says:

"The whispered word has gone forth to the faithful to prepare for the event in every constituency. Thus the alarm is sounded and the advice is given 'not to underrate the strength of the opposition.' The interpretation of these words means really that the faithful are not to overrate the strength of the government or underestimate its weakness. For it is in the discontent among the more self-respecting members of Mr. McBride's following that the opposition has much strength. The breaking down of the machine by the disintegration of its recalcitrant parts is the surest premonition of the downfall of Bowserism and two-man government in the province.

"There is no excuse for an early dissolution of the Legislature. Never in its history has the government of Mr. McBride had laid before it so many progressive suggestions—many of them of a really statesmanlike character—as during the present session. The opportunities for reconstruction have not only been unusually numerous, but many valuable measures have been actually urged upon the Premier and his colleagues. Instead of heeding these the Premier and the Attorney General have been passing legislation calculated to bring all the legislative activities within their own control. Delegations are encouraged to bring their requests to the government and the government is being given power by the Legislature to do anything and everything that ordinarily constitutes the functions of the assembly. Privileges and franchises are placed with dangerous prodigality in the hands of these two governmental heads, and so far as the functions of legislature are concerned the whole of the business of the government might as well be done by order in council. That is how it will be done if Mr. McBride secures another term of office.

"Rumor has it that the same tactics are to be followed at this election that characterized and discredited the elections of 1909. In that year the voters' lists were not available to opposition candidates until a day or two before the nominations. There had been no revision of these lists and their condition, when they finally came into the hands of the committees, was found to be disgraceful. Even the friends of the government were shamed by the mangled and padded condition of the lists. There is no doubt that the same condition will be found to exist when the lists are forthcoming for the next election. Nothing will be allowed to interfere with Mr. McBride obtaining a solid verdict if machine made voters' lists can accomplish that end. Some of the Premier's friends have expostulated with him respecting these things, but to no purpose. He must be returned to power once more, and with the legislative functions deliberately placed in his hands by his servile following, he will not fail to work his own sweet will during the next term. It is not a pleasing prospect."

AD WOLGAST NOW TRAINING

Champion Not Bothered by Appendicitis and Says He Will Be Ready for a Twenty-Round Go in July.

Ad Wolgast peeled for practice play at Jack Doyle's, Los Angeles, for the first time since he was stricken with appendicitis last Thanksgiving Day and practiced about in his ring togs. Wolgast weighed exactly 134 pounds when he started work, and at the finish of his shadow boxing, handball play and light bag punching the title holder had taken off two pounds.

"I felt no inconvenience whatever," asserted Ad, "and am positive now that I will get back in the game just as strong and just as good as I ever was."

"I was just hanging around

to see the Attell-Kilbane fight on February 22," explained the champion. "Now I'll skip east and take on several short bouts during April and May. There's a chap in Pittsburg named Harry Moore who used to be good to me when friends were few. I'm going to give him the chance to stage my first 1912 fight. If I pass through my trial bouts all right I'll be back here ready for a twenty round even on July 4."

It will be welcome news to the sporting world that Wolgast has so far recovered as to indulge in light training and that the champion has all of his old time confidence. His first six round bout, no matter who his opponent may be, will be watched with great interest.
